LONG JURY FAILS TO REPORT

Montpelier, Vt., Oct. 31.—While George A. Long paced his narrow cell in an agony of suspense today, the jury that has his life in its hands continued its unhurried consideration of the evidence linking him with the alleged murder of Mrs. Lucina A. Broadwell of Barre.

A decision was apparently hours away. Not since the deliberations began yesterday afternoon have the jurymen sent for instructions from the court.

Hope and fear alternated in the demeanor of the prisoner, as the issue of life and death was fought out in the little jury room. Delay in reaching a verdict he regarded as a good sign, auguring at the worst a disagreement, but the torturing uncertainty drove him into moody fits of despair, when he feared the worst.

ELEVATOR DROPS; 20 INJURED

Worcester, Oct. 31.—Twenty persons were injured today when a heavily loaded passenger elevator fell from the fourth floor of the State Mutual Building to the basement.

Those who escaped broken bones were on the verge of hysteria when the elevator door was finally pried loose, and the panic-stricken occupants released.

Engineers ascribe the accident to a defective safety clutch. An investigation has been demanded by city officials.

Those seriously injured were rushed to the City Hospital, where it developed that several had suffered broken legs and ankles. Others were suffering from shock. It is not thought likely that any of the victims will die. The State Mutual is considered the busiest block in Central Massachusetts, and the elevators are used daily by thousands.

Coal Strike Bulletins

LOUISVILLE, KY.—Two riot companies of Federal troops armed with machine guns are today nearing the West Virginia coal fields for emergency service, having left this city on instructions from Major-General Leonard Wood, commander of the Central Division.

CLEVELAND—In order to act speedily on any eleventh hour peace proposal to avert the strike, the coal operators' executive committee will remain in session here until tomorrow night. It will formulate a policy to be followed if the strike becomes effective.

SANDUSKY, O.—During the night 100 infantrymen of the regular army from Fort Benjamin Harrison arrived at Port Clinton and were barracked there to be available in the event of disorder in Northern Ohio. The government has seized 640 carloads of coal awaiting shipment by lake.

COLUMBUS, O.—"There will be between 40,000 and 50,000 miners on strike in Ohio by midnight," said G. W. Savage, secretary-treasurer of the United Mine Workers of America for the Sixth District with headquarters here.

SPRINGFIELD, ILL.—There will be little effort at operation of mines in Illinois if the strike order goes into effect. An almost complete shutdown is predicted. There will be but a thirty-day supply of coal on hand.

STRIKE VOTE BY R. R. WORKERS ORDERED

Washington, Oct. 31.—Orders have been issued local unions of the railway organizations affiliated with the American Federation of Labor to take a strike vote in the event of the anti-strike clauses of the Cummins bill for the return of the railroads is adopted by Congress, E. C. Davidson, secretary of the International Machinists' Union, announced today.

Davidson said that 1,600,000 men who are members of the fourteen railway crafts affiliated with the A. F. of L. were being notified to prepare to strike in the event that such action took places in Congress. He said further that the fourteen railway organizations connected with the A. F. of L. would act together to fight any move to return the railroads to their private owners until the workers had been assured improved working conditions.

UNION LEADERS FACE ARREST FOR CONTEMPT OF COURT

Washington, Oct. 31.—As soon as word was received in Washington that an injunction against the coal miners' officials had been grated, Attorney-General Palmer was called upon by a delegation of labor leaders who declard organized labor would use its entire strength to fight this action. The delegation included Warren S. Stone of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers, L. E. Sheppard of the Brotherhood of Railway Conductors, B. M. Jewell, J. J. Forrester, L. J. Ross and F. Hewitt of the American Federation of Labor.

Indianapolis, Ind., Oct. 31.—Officials of the United Mine Workers are enjoined from enforcing a nation-wide strike of bituminous miners under the terms of a temporary restraining order issued by Federal Judge A. B. Anderson here today. Unlawful conspiracy to limit the output and facilities for the transportation of coal is charged in the proceedings.

Eighty-four officials of the Mine Workers' organization are made defendants under the restraining order. Frank J. Hays, president; John L. Lewis, vice-president and acting president; William Green, secretary, and eighty-one others, comprising the executive board, the scale committee and district presidents, are defendants.

Immediate arrests for contempt of court will follow any attempts to continue strike plans.

Hearing on permanent injunction proceedings will be held at an early date.

STRIKE CALLED OFF IN KENTUCKY

Announcement of the beginning of the great soft coal miners' strike today when 1,600 men walked out of East Ohio mines was offset by the statement that the strike vote had been rescinded in three Kentucky counties. Government officials affected to believe that this latter action was the first of a series of similar decisions which may prevent the greatest industrial conflict in history. From 400,000 to 600,000 miners are scheduled to strike at midnight tonight. Secretary Wilson was informed that 6,000 men were affected when the strike vote was rescinded in Hopkins, Webster and Christian counties, Kentucky.

UNITED STATES COURT ISSUES INJUNCTION AGAINST STRIKING MINERS

"This is an exceptional case," said the assistant attorney-general. "It does not involve the right of labor to organize or to strike. But it is based on the government's broad power to protect its people.

"This action is brought under a special law—the Lever act, created for war time to keep food and guns moving, and, this law is still effective. The government's right to prevent the restriction of the output of coal in this case is definitely settled in the Dubs case and the Allen case. (The Allen case involved traffic in Indiana vehicles.)

"IRREPARABLE INJURY."

Pointing out that the Washington wage agreement which the miners sought to terminate at midnight tonight, applied only to the central competitive field — Pennsylvania, Ohio, Illinois and Indiana—Mr. Ames asserted the miners' officials had overstepped these bounds and called a strike effective throughout the United States.

"The penalties are inadequate in this "arrangement" by the miners, which will result in an "irreparable injury" in which the people will be the "innocent sufferers," said Ames.

"The criminal courts are inadequate to punish the wrong and protect the people, he declared.

"The injury is done if the strike goes on," the attorney-general's report said in laying before the court the necessity for action before the strike became effective.

"The situation is fraught with consequences impossible to foretell."

"The strike will reduce the production of coal by millions, according to the miners' own statements," said Ames, and it will enforce idleness, bring cessation of labor, and widespread suffering that will constitute a national disaster. It will be impossible, if the strike become effective, to continue transportation, mails would be halted, army supplies and munition would come to a standstill, food and fuel would be held up and it would be impossible to deliver raw materials to factories or to carry away their products, declared the assistant attorney-general.

U. S. HAS 1,237 CONTRACTS.

"The government has a pecuniary interest, too, in this strike, he pointed out, "in that it has 1,237 contracts providing for the delivery of 38,000,000 tons of coal daily to railroad administration.

"It will be impossible for the operators to fill those contracts if the miners' program is successful."

Stoppage of transportation because of the curtailment of the fuel output would result in an enormous decrease in railroad revenue, it was said, and the government would be compelled to make up the deficit under the guarantee.

That the miners hoped to enforce their demands for 60 per cent. increase in wages, the six-hour day and five-day week through the distress a shutdown of the mines would bring was indicated in a review of miners' grievances leading up to the final strike call.

Union Miners in 19 Coal Strike States Total 401,488

Indianapolis, Oct. 31.—There were 401,488 actual union miners in the nineteen States affected by the strike in September, according to a statement given out at headquarters of the miners' union here. These figures were compiled when the Cleveland convention was in session showing actual membership standing at the end of August in twenty-one bituminous districts, as follows:

Private Consumers Will Be First Hit in Strike; Big Industries Next

By International News Service.

New York, Oct. 31.—Outstanding features of reports gathered in the International News service today from the various coal mining centers were:

1—Union officials claim that all organized miners will obey the strike call tomorrow morning and that approximately 400,000 will quit work.

2—The private consumer will feel the effect almost immediately, while most of the public service corporations and big industries have from two to five weeks' reserve supply of coal on hand.

3—In only a few localities are there any indications that disorders will break out.

According to the claims of officials of the United Mine Workers, about 440,000 miners will strike in Pennsylvania, Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky. The chief danger spot in this district is apparently West Virginia. A big force of regular troops has been ordered into that State.

The great industrial belt around Pittsburgh will be hard hit. Officials of the miners' union claim that the operations in that zone have only about thirty days reserve supply of fuel on hand.

A great scramble for coal is reported from the Middle West, especially Illinois, the third largest coal producing State in the country. The miners' fuel fund in Illinois is reported to be of a low ebb, but most of the public service corporations and the mining plants are said to have enough coal on hand to run from four to six months or more.

Strike leaders claim that 30,000 miners will quit in Kentucky. There are a number of non-union fields in Illinois and Kentucky worked by their own men, but their production is so small that it cannot be counted. So far the course of big mines in the Middle West have made no move towards using strike-breakers, it was said.

In Alabama, the biggest coal producing State in the country, the union officials claim that 80 per cent. of the miners will quit. State troops may be distributed through the Alabama coal fields if disorders break out. Preparatory steps in this direction have already been taken.

The railroads have been taking over great reserve quantities of coal in the East, union officials claim, and that the Western fields are well organized and that the men will obey the strike call.

BOY SAVES CHILDREN FROM RUNAWAY HORSE

The presence of mind of a twelve-year-old boy saved a number of children from serious injuries if not death when a runaway horse bolted on Vinal avenue, Somerville, and dashed through Central Hill Park today.

The horse was hitched to a wagon owned by the New England Towel Supply Company. John Keefe, twelve, of Skilton avenue, who was playing with the children in the park, grasped a stick and waving it before the horse managed to divert his course from the group and bring him to a stop.

Wilson Restores Maximum Prices on Coal

By International News Service.

Washington, Oct. 31.—President Wilson today issued an executive order restoring maximum coal prices, made by the fuel administration which were suspended when the fuel administration ceased its work. This is the first step actually taken by the President in the coal situation. The purpose of the order is to prevent profiteering during the period of the coal strike.

President Wilson's order was as follows:

"Whereas, the United States fuel administration, acting under the authority of an executive order issued by me, dated the 23d of August, 1917, appointing the said fuel administrator and of subsequent executive orders, and in furtherance of the purpose of said orders and of the act of Congress therein referred to and approved August 10, 1917, did on January 31, 1919, and on February 20, 1919, execute and issue orders suspending until further order by the President certain rules, regulations, orders and proclamations theretofore promulgated relating to the fixing of prices, the production, sale, shipment, distribution, apportionment, storage and use of coal, and, whereas it is necessary to restore and maintain during the war certain of said rules, regulations and proclamations,

ANNULS OLD ORDERS.

"Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, acting under the authority of the aforesaid act of Congress, approved August 10, 1917, do hereby revoke and annul said orders of January 31, 1919, and February 20, 1919, to the extent necessary to restore the said rules, regulations, orders and proclamations therein suspending, concerning:

"(A) Fixing prices of bituminous and lignite coal at the mines;

"(B) Fixing or regulating commissions of persons or agencies performing the functions of middlemen dealing in bituminous and lignite coal;

"(C) Fixing or regulating gross margins, or prices, of wholesale and retail dealers in bituminous and lignite coal.

"And do hereby restore all of said rules, regulations, orders and proclamations, to the extent herein provided to full force and effect, as if they had not been suspended.

SUBJECT TO EMERGENCY.

"Inasmuch as it is contemplated that it may be necessary from time to time to revoke other portions of said order of January 31, 1919, and February 20, 1919, and to restore to full force and effect rules, regulations, orders and proclamations, or portions thereof, regulating the production, sale, shipment, distribution, apportionment, storage or use of bituminous and lignite coal, the fuel administrator shall as occasion arises restore, change or make such rules or regulations relating to the production, sale, shipment, distribution, apportionment, storage or use of bituminous or lignite coal as in his judgment may be necessary.

(Signed) "WOODROW WILSON.

"White House, October 31, 1919."

HOW PRICES RUN.

Attached to the President's order was a supplemental list of coal prices which will be effective because of the order. These prices are in three classes, run of mine, prepared sizes and slack or screenings. The price list runs from a minimum of $2.60 a ton for Virginia lo coal to a maximum of $4.60 a ton for Colorado coal.

Governor Clarkson, director of the Council of National Defence, today conferred with Secretary of Labor Wilson and had before him all information on the coal situation gathered by the Council of National Defence.

Proud Revere Dad Takes Movies of Marine Son

James B. Ulleyn of Revere, who enlisted a few days ago in the marine corps at the recruiting station on Tremont Row, bid his father good-bye on the wharf of the Merchants and Miners' Steamship Company, Atlantic avenue.

The father wanted everyone to know that his boy went away happy, so he had a moving picture man present to film his son dancing a hornpipe. The picture will be shown in his home town.

The young man will leave the boat at Norfolk and take the train there to Paris Island, South Carolina, to train.

SUSPENDS TEN CENT NARROW GAUGE FARE

The Public Service Commission today ordered the Narrow Gauge Railroad to suspend until December 1 the introduction of a ten-cent rate, which was to go into effect November 2. The Narrow Gauge had planned to sell tickets in strips of twenty each for $1.75. Another hearing on the proposed new rates will be held November 10.

WARN TEACHERS NOT TO JOIN FEDERATION

Eight hundred Middlesex County High School teachers were today warned by Florence M. Hale, State Agent of Education for Maine, to keep out of the Federation of Labor.

"We don't want to join any federation," she said. "If they walk out, we must walk out.

"The public will finally be with us. Let us hang together with loyalty to one another."

That sentiment was applauded. She spoke at the sixty-fifth annual conference, held in the State House Auditorium.

"Vast numbers of educated men and women who were formerly the teachers of the country have entered into lines of work opened by the War," she said. "The serious shortage has compelled the attention of the hitherto indifferent public.

"Better salaries are needed in order that the teachers may give the best possible service to the pupils. Teachers ought not always to be under the haunting apprehension of old age and sickness. But some other inducement than salary ought to be the main motive for entering the teaching profession."

Frederick Houston Kent of Boston, who was the Y. M. C. A. educational director in England, said that the English people want to be friendly with America. "They have the friendship," he said, "of people who were fed when you went hungry to feed them and of people who were saved when you turned the tide of battle that was against them. If suspicion and distrust cause these two Nations to fall out, civil liberty will fail."

B. U. FRESHMEN GIVE DUNSANY PLAY TONIGHT

"Fame and the Poet," by Lord Dunsany, will be given tonight in connection with the freshman acquaintance party at the College of Liberal Arts of Boston University. The players are Waitstill Sharp, Hingham, as Harry de Raves, the poet; Miss Catherine Perkins as Fame, and Frank Shapiro as Dick Prattle, lieutenant-major of the Royal Horse Marines.

Dean William Marshall Warren, Professor Agnes Knox Black and Professor Dallias Lore Sharp of the faculty will address the freshmen.

JITNEY LICENSES IN DANVERS SUSPENDED

The Danvers Board of Selectmen has voted to suspend indefinitely the licenses of all jitney bus operators in that town. This action was the result of a recent special town meeting at which the vote was 189 to 64 in favor of retaining the trolley system. The order of the Selectmen will go into effect on Sunday night, and on Monday morning the Bay State Street Railway will put into effect a special ticket rate between Salem and Danvers.

FIRE IN BASEMENT OF EAST BOSTON WINE SHOP

Hundreds of thirsty souls in East Boston collected hopefully today when fire was discovered in the cellar of a wine shop at No. 32 Maverick square. Their hopes were dashed, however, when the small blaze was quickly gotten under control, without the rolling out of any of the stock stored in the cellar. The property is owned by Charles Belden and has been closed since July 1. The origin of the fire is not known.

PRIEST TO PRESS CHARGE OF IMMORAL DANCES IN CAMBRIDGE

FIGHTS USE OF SCHOOL HALLS

Father Blunt Objects to Renting Same to "Rowdy" Outsiders

Rev. Hugh F. Blunt, pastor of the Sacred Heart Church, East Cambridge, will personally appear, if invited, before the Cambridge School Committee to press his charges of immorality, wholesale intoxication and rowdyism at public dances given in the evening by persons who rent the dance hall of Cambridge public schools for that purpose.

"I have not yet been invited to appear by the School Committee," said Father Blunt, "but if I am so invited, I will. I have already signified my willingness to do so in a letter to the School Committee."

"He will be invited to appear, though the letter has not yet been sent," Mrs. Ferdinanda W. Reed, of the Cambridge School Committee, announced.

In the meantime, in the face of the denial of intoxication, immorality and rowdyism at the dances by Mrs. Reed, Father Blunt reiterates his accusations.

"We are working too hard for the spiritual and moral welfare of our people of this district," says he, "to have that work destroyed by ill-regulated social settlement dreams. My interest in these dances shall continue, for the sake of my people here, and if I cannot get assistance from the committee I will look for it in other quarters.

MEANS TO LURE PEOPLE.

"It would seem that everybody may have the hall of the Thorndike School for the asking. The night of September 5, for instance, a dance was held by a gang of young girls of the average age of 17. I questioned the girls as to the object of the dance, and they did not hesitate to tell me that they were running it in order to get enough money to pay for a cottage at the beach next summer. These girls represented no accredited organization—just a few individuals with no responsibility, surely not to be trusted to run a public dance.

"Last Winter the hall was let to many groups of like irresponsibles, with the result that, at times, immoral deeds were committed in the cigar room. Hence I consider these dances which attract many undesirables, which are not properly chaperoned, and which are exposed to many evils, menaces to the young people of this district."

Father Blunt, however, expressed belief that the evils cited last year and this year so far would be corrected. "The Cambridge School Committee, every member of it," said he, "is as anxious to make conditions of public dances given in school halls above reproach as I am. Personally I cannot say that I favor letting school halls for dances. An undesirable element is bound to come in. If do not see, since the dances are public, how the hoodlums can be kept out. But the school halls, perhaps, could advantageously be used as neighborhood centres, outside of school hours. This, however, interests me less than the moral evils at present needing remedy."

FATHER BLUNT'S LETTER.

The matter of conditions at public dances, given in school halls, rented for that purpose, was first placed before the Cambridge School Committee by a letter to that committee from Father Blunt early in the school year.

That letter was answered by Mrs. Ferdinanda W. Reed, chairman of the committee for extended use of school buildings, denying conditions. Father Blunt then reiterated the charges, in a letter to Mrs. Reed, now in possession of the Cambridge School Committee, part of which letter follows.

"Some days ago I received your communication of October 11. I caused me a deal of wonder until I read a copy of the Cambridge Press. Then I understood that your communication was not so much an answer to my letter as a justification for School Committee and the public of the strange things that recently happened in the letting of the Thorndike School Hall. Because, my dear Mrs. Reed, you really do not answer my letter. You ignore all the charges I made. In your letter you say:

"Mr. Church, Mr. Church is the agent who has power to rent the public school halls in Cambridge' does not let the hall to any individual on their own responsibility. A responsible adult must always be one who secures the permission, and some of the mothers must always act as chaperons. One of the janitors or matron is always in charge, but, of course, she cannot be in more than one place at a time. None of the janitors is stationed on the floor with the classrooms and no person is allowed to enter classrooms or loiter on that floor."

"ATTEMPT TO WHITEWASH."

"You say nothing," Father Blunt continues, in reiterating the charges to which I refer, in his letter, "of Mr. Church's report to you. Now, the dance, in particular, Mr. Church assured me that he found conditions far from objectionable. That no one of as one dance during the week of investigation, half of the dancers were under the influence of liquor, evidently your assurance, given to the committee and to the public as to the proper conduct of the dances, is in reference to the future. For, as I already stated in my letter, the safeguards mentioned by you—as if always in force—have been up to now grossly violated. It all reads very well, and was, I presume, accepted by the committee as a bona fide report of actual findings, with the implication that I did not know what I was talking about when I made my own complaint. It is an evident attempt to whitewash the whole affair.

"Now, if the investigators are really in earnest, and if they are unwilling to take the word of me and my fellow-priests, I would refer them to the police captain of this district, who will be able to tell them of the innumerable complaints made by the residents as to the rowdyism that so often takes place at the close of the Thorndike school dances.

"I thank you for my interest and co-operation. It is plain that my interest is diminished as interference. My interest shall continue, however, for the sake of my people here, and if I cannot get any assistance from the committee, I will look for it in other quarters. We are working too hard for the spiritual and moral welfare of our people of this district to have that work destroyed by ill-regulated social settlement dreams."

Fishermen Trying to Boost High Price of Scallops

Onset Bay Grove, Oct. 31.—While Boston and New York pay as high as 70 cents for a dish of scallops, an attempt is being made here to restrict the output and force the price still higher. A record crop of the bivalves is being harvested off Onset Bay Grove, Bourne, Wareham, Marion and Mattapoisett. Those who take a purely selfish view of the situation fear that continued production will mean a lowering of prices, and want the harvesting stopped.

Unless the weather turns suddenly cold they say retailers will lessen their demand. Dredgers, "shuckers," and others engaged in the scallop trade are earning big wages, and have been working incessantly for weeks.

The fishermen say that the middlemen and retailers get most of the profit represented in a dish of the bivalves at 70 cents, and that those who do the actual work are not profiteering. Suggestion of restriction of output has fallen on stony ground so far. A meeting to consider the advisability of such a step broke up after considerable wrangling.

ACTRESS SAYS BROKER IS BIGAMIST

Helene Montrose Causes Arrest of Husband, Napoleon A. Bourasse

New York, Oct. 31.—Miss Helene Montrose, well-known actress, has caused the arrest of her husband, Napoleon Arthur Bourasse, on a charge of bigamy. Bourasse was taken into custody by Detective Flood of the District Attorney's staff, and held in $5,000 bail in The Tombs Court.

Miss Montrose complained to the District Attorney about six weeks ago. She said she had learned that her husband had a wife living in California.

Miss Montrose, in an affidavit, gives her full name as Helene Montrose St. Aubyn. She said she was married to Bourasse, who is a Wall street broker, on February 17, 1915. Her affidavit recites that her husband had been married to Miss Mary Coyne, July 3, 1911, in the Church of the Holy Innocents, and that his wife is still living and has a young daughter by Bourasse.

MARRIAGE WAR ROMANCE.

Miss Montrose told Assistant District Attorney Kilroe that her marriage to Bourasse was a romance born in the first dreadful days of War, when the Germans were making their smashing drive toward Paris. At that time she was studying music in Paris and was one of many who fled when it was feared the French capital would fall.

Among the other Americans in the flight was Bourasse. He assisted her in getting her baggage out of Paris, and real friendship grew, which she said, resulting in the marriage six months later in Brooklyn. At that time, according to the young actress, Bourasse said he represented a French banking company in America, she said.

"I lived with him six months, during which time we moved in five different hotels in New York City. I was forced to leave him because of his treatment. He told me about a year after our first meeting in Paris that he had previously been married, but that was fifteen years ago. In fact that his first wife was dead."

SOLD FIRST WIFE WAS DEAD.

Bourasse defended his marriage to Miss Montrose when questioned by Mr. Kilroe by saying that when he married Miss Montrose she had told him his first wife had died.

Miss Montrose at present is a film actress. She appeared with Nora Bayes in "Ladies First."

In connection with a separation suit, Miss Montrose declared, Bourasse is a pal of Attorney General Palmer, commanding the North Atlantic Coast Artillery District, who has just finished extensive plans for improvement.

Major-General C. R. Edwards with other officers today gave attention to details of these plans and they will be sent to Major-General Coe, chief of the coast artillery in Washington.

They provide, it is declared, for such utter protection of the New England coasts that no enemy could withstand the withering fire to which he would be exposed should an attempt be made to land an army on these shores.

General Edwards in discussing the plans said: "They will be sent to Washington after we have given them an exhaustive examination here. They reflect credit upon the ability and skill of General Buckman."

Ruckman's Work for Strengthening N. E. Fortifications, Examined at Conference

A conference of army officers was held today at Chauncy street headquarters upon better defenses for the New England coasts.

The subject has been under consideration for some time by Brigadier-General John W. Ruckman, commanding the North Atlantic Coast Artillery District, who has just finished extensive plans for improvement.

Major-General C. R. Edwards with other officers today gave attention to details of these plans and they will be sent to Major-General Coe, chief of the coast artillery in Washington.

RAYMOND C. HASTINGS WED AT LEOMINSTER

Raymond C. Hastings, son of Senator and Mrs. George A. Hastings of No. 1128 Commonwealth avenue, was today married to Miss Helen Brogaard at the home of the bride in Leominster. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nells Brogaard of Hartley street, Leominster. For several years she has been a secretary to Judge Franklin Freeman. The bridegroom is head of the Hastings Lime Company in North Adams. The ceremony was performed by Rev. William M. Crawford, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Leominster. Harry B. Blythe of New York was best man and Anna Brogaard, sister of the bride, bridesmaid.

CHARGE STRIKER WITH THROWING MISSILES

Royal Hint That Opera Star Dresses Too Scantily

By International News Service.

London, Oct. 31. — The arrival of Queen Victoria of Spain, who is expected to attend the opera during her visit, has led to a diplomatic request by the Lord Chamberlain, Viscount Sandhurst, regarding the draperies of Mona Paiva of the Russian ballet, who has presumably been in the habit of forgetting to put on the most of her costume before appearing. King Alfonso had attended a performance before his wife arrived.

POSTPONE CONTEST OVER GERAGHTY BABY

Providence, R. I., Oct. 31.—For the third time the hearing on Jack Geraghty's application for custody of his baby son has been postponed by agreement of counsel. The hearing scheduled for tomorrow was delayed one week. Geraghty, whose suit for divorce is pending, asked that the child be awarded him on the ground that its mother, formerly Julia French, was unfit for that responsibility.

PLANS CHELSEA RENT PROFITEERING PROBE

Secretary Howie of the State Commission on the Necessaries of Life held another conference today with Mayor Melvin B. Breath of Chelsea, regarding the contemplated prosecution of rent profiteers in that city. No statement was given out, but Mayor Breath said that the work would continue. He expects to appoint a local committee of three to investigate the situation in Chelsea.

CITY RECEIVES $5,000,000 IN TAXES

Mayor Contributes $100,000 Check; Interest on Bills Begins After Tomorrow

More than $5,000,000 in checks and cash for taxes and the first 1919 tax bills are received at the city collector's office today. Including a check for $100,000 from Mayor Andrew J. Peters.

The line crowded the City Hall corridors waiting their turn to pay in person, and mail bags stuffed full of checks were received at the hall in batches.

The total amount due the city according to City Collector Frank S. Deland, who has charge of collecting special sidewalk, water and other department assessments, as well as real estate and personal property.

Tomorrow is the last day for payment of taxes without interest later than that a per cent will be added to the total amount. Failure that mail bearing a later date than November 1 when contains a check for the payment of the tax without interest, would be promptly returned. The collector's office closes at 4 o'clock today and from then on the collection force will work on Monday to handle the money received by mail.

The biggest single amount received is from the Boston Elevated Railway Company, which pays taxes on many downtown blocks, who sent in thirty checks, totaling $1,000,000. A check for $1,000,000 from the New Haven railroad is also in the mails, the collector was informed.

Mayor Peters paid $100,000 as trustee of several properties. Little if any of this tax is for his own estate, it was stated, although the Mayor owns property on South street and Dakota Flats, on which he pays a personal tax.

Aside from special assessments the tax due the city under the rate of $28.60 is the amount. This is divided into real estate, $21,371,348; personal, $1,266,911, and mail taxes, $155,389.

DECLARE DOCK STRIKE IS RAPIDLY WANING

New York, Oct. 31. — Representatives of private shipping companies and the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation in longshoremen had gone back to work and that the strike was rapidly dwindling away. The unarmed strikers called a meeting today to discuss the offer of their employers to promise offer to return to work at 85 cents an hour instead of 70 cents effective on the National Adjustment Commission.

TUFTS ASSERTS RUSSELL IS 'UNFAIR'

Says Newton Arson Cases Were Not Pressed Because of Lack of Evidence

Nathan A. Tufts, district attorney for Middlesex County, today answered the letter of William E. Russell, his opponent for election to the office, who asked why four cases of arson were not pressed, while only one man, "the torch" in the case, was sent to jail.

In his answer District Attorney Tufts states that Wiseman, the man convicted, alone of the defendants pleaded guilty, and that even the prosecuting officer admitted he had no evidence of value against the others, all of whom pleaded not guilty.

Also in his reply the district attorney brands his opponent "With unfair tactics "when fairness is the primary requisite of the district attorney's office." District Attorney Tufts' letter reads:

TUFTS' ANSWER.

"In reply to the inquiry of my opponent with reference to certain defendants in an arson case, case No. 2, out of substantially 9,000 which he has seen fit to inquire about, I will state that the man who set the fire was apprehended in Columbus, O., brought back from that city by officers under a warrant of Middlesex County, and, upon a plea of guilty, was sentenced to State prison. The cases of the others who were indicted with him were laid before the presiding justice of the court. All the facts were given him, and, after full investigation in which all parties were heard, one case was placed on file and another not pressed. This was done at the suggestion of the presiding justice of the court, because of the fact that the evidence was insufficient to warrant placing the men on trial.

"The alleged offense took in Newton. Inspector Edward P. O'Halloran of the Newton Police Department, an officer of the highest integrity and in whom I have the greatest confidence, as has everyone else who knows him, was absolutely satisfied of the innocence of the defendants in question.

"Let me tell you now, sir, that every man charged with crime is not guilty. The Grand Jury investigation is a one-sided affair at which witnesses for the Commonwealth alone are heard. It is my policy before placing a man on trial to give a defendant an opportunity to tell his story. This is done in every case.

ALLOWS BENEFIT OF DOUBT.

"Where there is, in my opinion, a reasonable doubt as to the defendant's guilt I give him the benefit of the doubt, and that practice has the thorough approval of every judge who has presided at the criminal court of Middlesex County. We have substantially 3,000 cases per year. There are but seventy-five days when we have court and jury. Not over seventy-five cases a year can be tried.

"We have many men of whose guilt there is no question who have to be tried, and these cases, of course, have precedence. This is a circumstance which you will appreciate when you have been longer at the bar.

"Let me add one thing further. Your practical residence in the Back Bay of Boston renders you unfamiliar with the traditions of Middlesex county. Above all other things, its citizens appreciate fairness. The case concerning which you have inquired you have known about for weeks. You have been a candidate for district attorney for two months, yet you wait until the eleventh hour to do something to discredit my administration. The prime requisite in a district attorney is fairness. You seem to be utterly lacking in that essential."

MALDEN WILL MAKE "L" PROTEST TONIGHT

Mayor Blodgett of Malden today announced that a public meeting would be held tonight in Columbus Hall, Highland avenue and Charles street, where residents of the city would have a chance to tell the Elevated trustees of their troubles with traffic.

The trustees have promised the Mayor to be present and listen to all kicks from residents of Malden. It is thought that a special protest will be made to the directors against the shuttle car system on Pleasant street.

MAINE TEACHERS OPPOSE LABOR UNIONS

Portland, Me., Oct. 31.—Members of the Maine Teachers' Association in convention here adopted resolutions expressing opposition to teachers becoming affiliated with labor unions, but declared for a campaign of education for higher pay to public school instructors. They also resolved to teach one hundred per cent. Americanism.

Governor Milliken, in an address, said that the schools in the State of Maine were the Plattsburg camps for the war which has been transferred from France to America. He strongly urged the teaching of Americanism.

Officers chosen were: President, Frank E. McGouldrick, Bar Harbor; vice-president, W. M. Maher, Millinocket; secretary, Glenn W. Starkey, Augusta; treasurer, Walter E. Sullivan

INDICT WHITE LAWYERS AND 109 NEGROES IN RIOTS

Helena, Ark., Oct. 31.—Two white men and 109 negroes were indicted by the Grand Jury here on charges growing out of the recent race riots in this section of the State. The negroes were charged with murder. The cases of thirteen negroes still held by the authorities were continued for further investigation.

U. S. Bratton, white, attorney, was indicted for barratry in connection with a negro uprising at Elaine several weeks ago. O. P. Casey, white, of the law firm with which Bratton is connected, was also indicted for barratry. Those indicted will be placed on trial November 3.

PLOT TO UNLOAD RUSSIAN MONEY IS ALLEGED

Charge Recent Reports of Gen. Yudenitch's Defeat of "Reds" Were Exaggerated

By KARL H. VON WIEGAND, Boston American Staff Correspondent.

Berlin, Oct. 31.—That the recent reports of the fall of Petrograd and the victories of General Yudenitch over the Bolshevists were largely a manoeuvre to facilitate the unloading of Russian roubles on the unsuspecting public, was the assertion made in a quarter known to be in close touch with the anti-Bolshevist movement.

It was regretfully admitted that General Yudenitch's successes had been greatly exaggerated. The local Russian anti-Bolshevist paper announced today, Yudenitch has suffered a series of severe reverses, and has been compelled to fall back and give up a number of places he had captured.

It is also alleged here that confidential information has been received to the effect that the French warships off Kronstadt did not participate in the bombardment or attempt to land any troops because of the uncertain attitude of the crews, the officers fearing a repetition of the Odessa mutiny.

DECLARES DOORS WIDE OPEN TO MISSIONARIES

Young American Women Needed in India, Says 85-Year-Old Teacher

Inaugurated as the fiftieth anniversary session of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Methodist Episcopal Church, gathered today for the third meeting of the session, with Miss Elizabeth Russell leading the morning worship. The attendance continues large.

A survey of the home field was the opening business, followed by an address on "The Needs of the World and How to Meet Them," by Miss Winifred H. Hindsinger. A survey of foreign fields followed. Miss Birney conducted the devotional service.

SCOFFED AT GIRLS' SCHOOL

"India as I knew it sixty years ago" was the subject of a talk given by Mrs. Lois S. Parker.

Mrs. Parker, who is eighty-five years old and the only surviving member of the society, spoke of her experiences in India at the beginning of the missionary movement.

"When I went to that country," she said, "nobody there had ever heard of Christianity; there were no schools and the women were treated as animals. When I asked permission to open a girls' school the men natives scoffed at the idea and said it would be useless to teach the cows. The bones were closed to us and every obstacle was put in our way.

"Today the doors are wide open, I am continued, and the women are calling for us to come and teach them. Young American women are needed; literature is needed, and money is needed. We are going to heed the call."

Today's session began with morning worship conducted by Mrs. H. B. Washburn. This was followed by the appointment of committees, the discussion of memorials and reports of the home and general offices.

DOORS ALWAYS OPEN.

The speakers that followed spoke on "children's work." Miss Emily Hartley, representing North Africa, dealt with conditions in Algiers. "The Mohammedan is not a very nice man," she said, "but I must say in his credit that I have never had a door closed against me."

"Girl babies are not welcomed in North Africa," she continued. "When a girl baby is born there is sorrow and wailing in the family. According to Mohammedan ideas girls are the cause of all the evil in the world."

Clara E. Barstow, from South Africa, spoke of the difficulties she had encountered there. "Although most of the republics of Latin America are Catholic," she said, "the majority of the men who are shaping the destinies of these countries do not believe in Jesus Christ, the cornerstone of democracy."

CHILDREN MISCHIEVOUS.

That the children of Africa are just as mischievous as American children was asserted by Dr. Esther Grimson, Methodist missionary to that land. "But they are much more ambitious to take an education," she continued.

Korea had several representatives at the convention, led by Mrs. Hyung Chan Kim, who spoke in America. Miss A. Jeannette Walter and Miss Bronon also spoke on the work of the Korean mission.

"We have hospitals and doctors, but not a single American nurse," said Miss Walter. "We have some of those nurses who served so splendidly in France come over and help us out."

Mrs. Alexander Campbor, wife of Bishop of Liberia, also spoke on "Africa's awakening and need." "Incredible though it may seem, they are still throwing children to the crocodiles," she said. "Africa needs the Gospel. Shall we send it to them, or shall we allow Mohammedanism to claim them?"

ELKINS ART COLLECTION LEFT TO PHILADELPHIA

Philadelphia, Oct. 31.—The late George W. Elkins' will, filed at Norristown, records the gift to Philadelphia of the financier's valuable collection of paintings, said to be worth many millions. To his children Mr. Elkins left $1,000,000 each, adding an extra $250,000 to each of the two daughters "to equalize gifts made to his sons." The children share equally in the residuary estate. To the widow, who was his second wife, the testator gave $50,000 in cash, $2,000 a year to be paid in the settlement of the estate and one-third of the residuary estate. His wealth was said to have left $50,000,000.

GEN. WOOD PRAISES K. OF C. CAMP WORK

The Knights of Columbus are congratulated on the results attained in army training camps, in a letter from Major-General Leonard Wood, received by the Committee on War Activities. General Wood wrote the letter on the eve of the K. of C. relinquishment of their relief work under orders from the War Department. He said he had observed the work at Camp Funston and other places, and that it was characterized by a spirit of liberality and helpfulness. Real assistance in the training of the men was noted, also the maintenance of high moral standards.

NORTH ADAMS BOY HIT BY STONE MAY LOSE SIGHT

North Adams, Oct. 31.—Herbert Brigham, eleven years, son of Mr. and Mrs. Allen E. Brigham, No. 73 Hall street, may lose the sight of his right eye as the result of being hit with a stone thrown by a companion.

The stone struck Brigham's glasses, causing a piece of the glass to enter the pupil of the eye.

WILLIAM T. LARKIN GETS ONE OF POPE'S MEDALS

The medal of the Order of St. Gregory was presented to William T. Larkin, overseas director of the Knights of Columbus.

The medal was one of three brought to this country by Miss Gladys Sheridan of Elmhurst, L. I. They were given to her by Pope Benedict. Distrlct Attorney Pelletier read holds the second medal, and Supreme Knight Flaherty of Philadelphia the third.

THIN PEOPLE NEED BITRO-PHOSPHATE

Increases Weight, Strength and Nerve Force in Two Weeks' Time in Many Instances

The average person is beginning to realize more and more that the lack of physical strength and nerve exhaustion (frequently evidenced by excessive thinness) are the direct causes not only of the failure to succeed in life's struggle for the necessities of existence, but also for the handicap in one's social aspirations. Compare the thin, sickly, angular frame with the well-rounded form which is usually accompanied by the bloom of health and attractiveness.

That millions of people are conscious of this handicap is evident from the continued appearance in newspapers and magazines of many suggestions proposing various remedies in food or medicine or exercises, either of which might or might not be appropriate for each case.

Authorities, however, agree that practically nerve tissue is absolutely essential to a strong, robust body and mind. Weak nerves, while indicated by a multitude of different symptoms, more frequently and generally result in lack of energy, sleeplessness, irritability, depression, etc., which conditions gradually consume the healthy flesh, leaving ugly hollows, a flat chest, bony neck and scrawny arms and legs. Our bodies need more phosphate than most of them are able to extract from the foods we eat nowadays, and many physicians affirm that there is nothing which may be taken into the human system that so effectively supplies this deficiency as the pure organic phosphate known as bitro-phosphate and sold by good druggists everywhere.

The essential principle of food elements in bitro-phosphate assimilated by the nerve cells should soon produce a pleasing change in nerve energy and increased vitality and strength. With the burdens of nervousness, sleeplessness, lack of energy, etc., lifted, normal weight with its attractive rounded lines and ruddy glow of health replaces the former picture of skin and bones. Georgia Hamilton, who was once thin and frail, reporting her own experience, writes: "Bitro-Phosphate has brought a magic transformation with me. I gained 14 pounds and never before felt so well."

CAUTION: Although Bitro-Phosphate is unexcelled for the relief of nervousness and attendant disorders, owing to its tendency to increase weight, one should watch the scales while taking it unless it is the desire to put on flesh.

FRENCH DEALERS IN CHAMPAGNE HARD HIT

Enforcement of Dry Law in America Leaves Them with Large Stocks

Paris, Oct. 31.—French champagne dealers who were preparing to ship a load in the United States the surplus stocks of champagne they had intended to export in 1914 have been thrown into consternation by the overriding of President Wilson's veto of the wartime prohibition enforcement act.

These surplus stocks which were stored in the great wine cellars of Rheims during the war are spoiling now and unfit for the French market. Sweetened champagne keeps, but the dry champagne does not. Thousands of barrels of the latter are now practically a dead loss, as the dealers are barred from shipping it to America while wartime prohibition exists.

Despite the closing of the American market, champagne is bringing the highest prices on record. A bottle of an inferior brand now costs three or four dollars retail and the better brands bring seven, eight or ten dollars in restaurants where the pre-war price was only three dollars.

It is in light wines that American prohibition has hurt the French export trade the most. The vintage this year is the best since 1911, the superabundance of the grape crop indicating a glut in the market of 1921.

TRAFFIC TIED-UP IN PARK STREET SUBWAY

A north-bound Sullivan square-Main street car split a switch and left the rails at the Park street subway station today delaying all north-bound cars. The cars following the derailed trolley were backed out of the subway. Passengers were sent through the Cambridge tube to the Washington street tunnel and thence to Charlestown.

PROVIDENCE TEACHERS OPPOSE UNIONIZATION

Providence, Oct. 31.—Nine hundred public school teachers here believe it "undignified" to affiliate with a union and despite the alleged efforts of one of the teachers to organize them it is said the efforts were frowned upon.

Leaders say Commissioner Walter G. Ranger voiced their sentiments when he said they should receive more pay. Commissioner Ranger addressed the teachers in convention here and warned against "betraying public interests." For six weeks, it is learned, a teacher has advocated affiliating with organized labor and advised a union as the only means by which added salary could be obtained.

Americans in France at the Mercy of Speculators

By Universal Service.

Special Cable Dispatch.

Paris, Oct. 31.—Americans now in France intending to return to the United States are at the mercy of Paris speculators, it is shown by revelations just made in a local newspaper.

It is demonstrated that while the steamship companies are claiming they are "all booked up" second class passage on the liner Lafayette is selling for $400 a ticket, while first class cabins are fetching $600 and $800 apiece.

FRENCH ACCENT LED TO CRUELTY

Mrs. Genevieve O'Connor was granted a divorce and $12 a week alimony, with the custody of her two children, when in the Suffolk [illegible] court she related a tale of cruelty, the start of which arose over a French accent in the speech of her husband, James P. O'Connor. She told the court that her husband chided her and used bad language.

Mrs. O'Connor said she left her husband for three years and then returned as his housekeeper. After two years in this capacity she discovered letters from another woman and again left him. During this time Mrs. O'Connor said she endured constant abuse for her children's sake.

This Year More than Ever Before It Is Advisable to

Do Christmas Shopping in November

Every indication points to an unexampled holiday buying this year. This buying, if it should follow the precedent of other years, would be largely concentrated in the weeks just preceding Christmas. But it will be very unwise to delay holiday shopping this year. Conditions are abnormal. Merchandise of the right kind is not as easy as usual to obtain, and will be less easy later on. Neither will it be as easy to supplement sufficiently our regular sales force with good extra salespeople during December. Therefore we most strongly urge and emphasize the necessity of doing the ordinary Christmas shopping so far as possible (and to use every effort to make it possible) in November. We have done our part by assembling our holiday stocks a full month earlier than customary.

Christmas Shopping in November will mean larger and better assortments to select from and the best possible individual attention and service.

The above statements apply with equal force to ALL our patrons. Those who purchase for cash and also those who have charge accounts with us.

As an additional inducement we make this announcement to those having approved charge accounts or wish to arrange for such:

All Charges for Merchandise purchased between November 1 and Christmas may be paid with Account to be rendered on January 1, 1920

And as a further encouragement to early Christmas shopping and as a reward to our loyal fellow workers for their faithful services during the past year

We shall pay our regular Christmas Commission of ½ of 1% to each of our salespeople on his or her total sales from November 1 to December 25

Our non-selling fellow workers will, of course, benefit in their Christmas bonus proportionately with our salespeople.

DR. DEAN'S SLAYERS SOUGHT TO BLAME INNOCENT PERSON

HAIR PIN 'PLANTED', IS BELIEF

By BURT FORD.

The woman's hairpin in the Dean murder mystery is a peculiar factor. There are certain phases of the case which indicate that the hairpin was "planted."

The manner in which the body was handled and disposed of shows that there was more method on the part of the murderers than appeared at the outset. Unless they had a design, they never would have gone to the trouble they did. Dr. William K. Dean might have been beaten or choked and left where he fell.

Tossing him into the cistern was an amateur thought. A well or cistern would be the very first place that even a child would look into when the search began.

If they had cared to conceal the body, it would have been an easy matter to have carried it away with them in the automobile and have disposed of it in any of the numerous mountain pockets in that region, where it would have lain a long time without fear of discovery.

Even placing it under the barn would have been a better hiding place than in the cistern.

EXPECTED EARLY DISCOVERY.

The murderers of Dr. Dean expected that his body would be found very early and apparently planned it that way. Selectman Boynton and other town officials have felt from the day of the tragedy that the murderers disposed of the body in a manner to serve as a warning to others who knew about spy activities.

If Dr. Dean had been shot by someone in the barn, Mrs. Dean scarcely could have heard the report where she walked in the bungalow if the barn door had been closed. The manner in which Dr. Dean was garroted with a halter rope bears a strong resemblance to a manner of killing common on the European continent.

It was in the elaborate binding and shrouding of the body that the murderers made a departure, and evidently for a purpose.

Apparently that purpose was to throw suspicion on Mrs. Dean and to make it appear that an insane person had committed the murder. This hypothesis, which is strengthened by many features of the case, furnishes further proof that the slayers of Dr. Dean were intimately acquainted with him and his wife and his home life and his premises.

It would be a very convenient loophole for them to wriggle through if the crime were fastened upon the insane widow who could not be held legally responsible. This would also be a swift way of disposing of the case.

It nearly worked. For months the officials proceeded on the theory that Mrs. Dean was the guilty person. This played right into the murderers' hands. It must have made them chuckle.

SCOFF AT REAL EVIDENCE.

Even today, fourteen months after the crime, there is a suspicious eagerness in certain quarters to pounce upon and actually to magnify any little detail which might point to Mrs. Dean and to scoff at or brush aside real clews and evidence which point elsewhere.

This tendency is one of the strangest unfortunate features of the Dean case, and it accounts for the lack of progress made.

It also accounts for the fact that nobody has been arrested or punished up to date for killing a patriotic American citizen who attempted to do his duty by offering to tell the Federal authorities what he knew of German spy activities in that region.

Why were certain persons eager to place the blame on Mrs. Dean?

Why did they ignore stronger evidence against other persons, some of whom were not entitled to any sympathy from loyal Americans?

The selectmen and the majority of the citizens of East Jaffrey answer these questions with emphasis. They say that it was to protect a certain man of prominence.

Whatever the cause or the motive the hinge of the scandal in the case is based on that feature, and the greater part of the people in that section refer to the case as a "scandal."

In binding and shrouding the body of Dr. Dean, the murderers went to such extremes as to fasten a burlap bag, which was drawn over the victim's head, with twine to the tail loops of his riding breeches. This was a feature which certain local investigators at once concluded would have been done only by an insane person, and apparently the slayers had done the work with that thought in mind.

INDICATES WOMAN NEAR.

If they hadn't had some such plan they certainly were wasting time and effort. This nice detail of fastening the bran sack to the belt loops brings us back to the woman's hairpin, found on the ground in the barn, after careful investigation, on the morning following the tragedy.

The hairpin would indicate the presence of a woman on the scene. If the slayers staged the crime to have it recast on the innocent widow, and if the hairpin was purposely dropped with that idea in mind, they blundered.

The hairpin is yellow bone, imitation amber, while the hairpins worn by Mrs. Dean were silver gray bone to blend with her white hair.

A hairpin similar to that found near the cistern was later discovered in the house which the Deans rented. It is possible that a woman was a witness to the tragedy and that she dropped the hairpin accidentally, in which event it would be a very important clew.

But if this theory is correct, it would indicate that a woman who was an active participant, and may have helped in disposing of the body.

The police, after careful investigation, is of the opinion that the hairpin was placed there as a blind and that there was no woman at the crime that night.

AT LEAST THREE MEN.

But there were at least three men. The murderer of a man was found in the hay in the loft of the Dean barn on the day the body was found, indicating that one of the assassins had remained there in ambush until Dr. Dean returned from the village.

Dr. Dean was followed very closely by an automobile, the tracks of which were found next day in a siding to the old wood road which leads to Perryville and which is not a popular highway for automobiles. Tracks of a car were plainly visible the following day, in spite of a violent thunder storm the day previous, when the body was found.

The heavy rain undoubtedly obliterated many clews, but enough remained to show that a party of three left an automobile in the old wood road on the night of the killing, cut across lots and came up behind the Dean barn. They left their foot tracks.

George P. Wellington, a game warden, trained in woodcraft, found footprints and freshly broken twigs leading across the field to the Dean estate from the automobile. By the automobile in the wood road, Wellington also found stones loosened from a wall. These all make up a very convincing trail.

What were men doing in the back lot that night?

Why didn't they come by way of the road into the Dean estate if there for an honest purpose?

Who hid in the hayloft?

What was he there for?

Surely the men did not come to aid Mrs. Dean to kill her husband.

ACTED LIKE SLAYERS.

They travelled and acted like murderers. They came to their victim through the underbrush by a back route, like burglars. They came with stealth and with murder in their hearts.

And the tracks left by the automobile on the siding off the old wood road and which are not the only evidence that an automobile figured in the tragedy.

The death car was heard by several witnesses living on the road, and it was actually seen by two persons in the village at midnight on the night of the crime.

So by every trail and clew and circumstance and by every process of deduction, Mrs. Dean is eliminated from the case and the persons interested in the signals are more deeply implicated.

What better motives could be desired than that furnished by the words of the victim himself to Mrs. Morrison that day, twelve hours before his murder?

BANISHED ALL DOUBT.

Furthermore, he banished all doubt as to the reason for his dread. It was not because of any fear of his wife or any domestic friction that he wished to appeal to the United States Department of Justice. Dr. Dean was too cultured for that.

It was not because he had a row with his wife that he wanted to start a Federal inquiry.

In fact, in that conversation with Mrs. Morrison he explicitly used the word "rights." He said Miss Ware had seen lights and he asked Mrs. Morrison if she had. She answered him in the affirmative and she and Dr. Dean agreed to watch for lights that night and he was to telephone her at midnight and use the code word "turkeys" if he saw any from a location indicated by Mrs. Morrison when she pointed from a certain stone on the Dean estate that day to fix the range for Dr. Dean.

Before he could keep that tryst, Dr. Dean was dead, and, in ignorance of the tragedy, Mrs. Morrison went to Boston on the early train as agreed, told the Department of Justice that Dr. Dean had something of importance to tell them and that he wanted one of their staff men to see Mr. Jaffrey to see him.

Mrs. Morrison was startled to read of Dr. Dean's murder in a Boston newspaper the next day and she reported the fact to the Department of Justice.

What better link could be welded than that! What better motive! Why waste time groping elsewhere?

It is a pity that Dr. Dean did not mail to Mrs. Morrison what he had on the subject, but he was too gallant a man to jeopardize a woman friend by sending it to her husband. When she asked him for the information, saying that it would be time enough to be worried by the Federal authorities in Boston, he replied:

"Mrs. Morrison, you are a woman. What I know is too dangerous for a woman to share."

Does that look as if he feared his invalid wife?

LONG SUSPICIOUS.

Dr. Dean had been in a position to see much of the anti-American activities that had been going on in that region for months. Apparently he had long been suspicious of certain things and persons, but with the determination that was one of his marked traits, he proceeded with caution and fairness.

Before the United States entered the war, Dr. Dean, like others, was very suspicious of signals that he had seen flashed from the mountains, but after our troops got into the fray and transports were crossing the Atlantic like shuttles, he naturally became more alert and alarmed.

Those with patriotic fervor he believed he admitted to his own words to Mrs. Morrison when he said:

"I know what I'll be sure, and I am ready now."

Dr. Dean was one of the most patriotic citizens in that section. He told many of his neighbors that he regretted that he was not young enough to shoulder a gun in the war and that he did not have a son to send to France.

He followed all the war developments in the newspapers studiously and discussed the various battles with neighbors.

COULD SPEAK GERMAN.

This very spirit would make him more solicitous than the ordinary person concerning any enemy activities and the fact that he could speak German is thought to have aided him to detect certain matters which might have been overlooked by a person ignorant of that language.

Hence when his conversation with Mrs. Morrison is analyzed it sheds much light on the mystery and directs suspicion where it fits.

Although he was reluctant to disclose too much to the woman whom he selected as a messenger to the Federal authorities, he gave enough to shape the course of any real investigations.

As a matter of fact it is seldom that a murder victim leaves so likely a clew to serve as a working basis for the solution of a crime.

Dr. Dean left the key. It is now up to the county and State authorities to use that key effectively.

Continued Tomorrow.

CONGRESS MAY ADJOURN NOV. 10, SAYS MONDELL

Washington, Oct. 31. — The belief that Congress may be able to adjourn on November 10 was expressed in the House by Representative Mondell, Wyo., the Republican floor leader.

"By that time I hope the House will have passed the railroad bill, a merchant marine measure, the oil land leasing bill and have disposed of the Berger case," Mondell said.

Washington, Oct. 31.—The House has passed the oil land leasing bill. The bill must be returned to the Senate for consideration of House amendments.

MICE REPLACE WILD GEESE AS WEATHER FORECASTERS

Concordia, Kas., Oct. 31.—Now comes the mouse as a weather "forecaster." Back to the hills with the wild geese, beaver, and other "old timers" in the forecasting game. Says a Kansas "pioneer," writing to a local newspaper.

"I never saw it to fail. I've watched those Kansas rodents for many years, and when the rodents come into the town houses you can be sure they have that peculiar hunch which wild things have that a severe Winter is coming.

"If I had anything to say about it, and had to stock up for a severe stretch of hard weather, I certainly would do it."

FARMERS ASK LAW TO KILL PHEASANTS

Windsor, Col., Oct. 31.—There is a law protecting pheasants, but the farmers in this section have asked permission to kill them because of their damage to crops. One instance of the activity of these birds is told by a farmer who states one field embracing ten acres was almost entirely stripped of leaves.

'HALF PER CENT.' BEER IN HANDS OF CHEMISTS

Fate of New Drink Hangs on Decision of Special Analyis of Federal Agents

Special chemists of the United States Treasury Department are now analyzing the beverages sold over Boston bars since the entrance of one-half of one per cent. beer, and the fate of the new drink hangs on the decision of these men.

Acting Collector Andrew J. Casey has introduced a system of conferences every day with his field force before the men, all trained in such work and familiar with the local liquor trade, go out to see that the law is enforced.

H. G. Seeley of Washington, assistant supervisor of collectors, and John P. Coogan, revenue agent in charge, are present at these conferences, while Chief Deputy E. L. Murphy outlines the procedure of the day to the investigators.

Attorney Frank A. Lynch, head of the law department of the revenue service, goes over the legal phases of the act each day and the men ask of him questions on legal points that have come up in the day's work.

The whole system is built to make for the most rigid possible enforcement of the law without favor to any dealer or manufacturer.

ARREST TWO, CHARGED WITH BREAKING JAIL

Edgar W. Barham and Edward McGuigan, both of St. John, N. B., were arrested in a South End lodging house today by special Officers Sullivan and Ryan of Station 4, charged with being fugitives from justice. Barham, the police said, was arrested in St. John for theft, but with the aid of McGuigan, managed to saw the bars of his cell and escape. They came to Boston together. At the lodging house they were known as James and Arthur McKay. Mesinger was recognized by the officers while they were making a general inspection of lodging houses.

"SEASICK GRIP' LATEST SCOURGE OF PARISIANS

Paris, Oct. 31.—"Seasick grip" is the latest Parisian malady. Hundreds of persons are affected by it.

The symptoms are a sudden violent sensation of seasickness, high fever and inability to retain food. The attack usually lasts three or four days. Those who never suffered the ordinary grip seem immune. Doctors say ordinary grip remedies are of no avail.

Ghosts, Goblins and Such, Tonight; but No "Punch"

Hallowe'en.

Tonight ghosts will walk unhindered; goblins lurk in the bushes or peer in our windows; witches ride broomsticks over our chimneys, and we walk downstairs backward, looking into a mirror.

But the ghosts and goblins and witches this eve will be those born of children's imagination. 'Tis not like other years—very often we all saw ghosts. And as for walking down the cellar stairs—only the lucky grown-ups will do that. It will be done on tip-toe, very stealthily, and those who carry out the old tradition will undoubtedly hold in hand a glass—but not that kind of a glass.

And cider, maybe, but no "punch."

As an afterthought, if anyone rings your doorbell and you try to open the door only to find that someone has tied it most securely—don't get sore.

JAILED SAILORS AWAIT TRIAL SINCE APRIL

Newport, R. I., Oct. 31.—The attention of at least two United States Senators and one Congressman has been called to the case of fifteen or more young sailors who have been under arrest at the Naval Training Station since last April, part of the time in solitary confinement and now under "confinement awaiting action."

The Senators were Senator Walsh of Massachusetts and Senator Gerry of this State, and more recently Congressman Burdick has been appealed to in behalf of one of the Rhode Island boys in the number.

These young women were placed under arrest under the general charge of conduct tending to the destruction of morals, but the Navy Department has been exceedingly slow in forwarding the specifications against them that they might be tried.

The apparent unnecessary delay on the part of the Navy Department in filing specifications and bringing the cases to trial was what caused the appeals to be made by the relatives and friends of the accused to Congress members.

While there are specific charges against some of these men, there is one in the list against whom no specifications have been filed, it is said, but still he is with the others and has been confined in the brig since April.

RED CROSS GAVE GUARDS 10,000 SWEATERS

Report Reveals How Emergency Policemen and Families Were Assisted

Ten thousand sweaters and many other comforts and necessities were supplied to State guardsmen by the Boston Metropolitan Chapter of the Red Cross, according to a report made public today by Allston Burr, chairman of the chapter, and other officials.

Between September 17 and October 15, 10,000 sweaters were sent to the State Guard quartermaster, and razors, soap, tooth brushes, tooth paste, pajamas, towels, socks, shoe laces, handkerchiefs, pencils, pipes, postcards, cigarettes, shawls, tobacco, gloves, games, paper cups, chocolate bars, combs, matches and other necessaries and comforts followed.

One hundred gallons of coffee were sent to the guardsmen by the Red Cross every night during the early days of their police duty service. Then the quantity was reduced fifty gallons a night. Fourteen hundred and thirty-five gallons had been served up to October 15.

The Home Service section of the Metropolitan chapter met the occasion by attending to the needs of the guardsmen's families. In some cases there was marked difference in pay between a guardsman on duty and his pay as a civilian, in such cases the Home Service section supplied various kinds of assistance.

On October 23 the Home Service section had supplied the needs of 124 families of guardsmen. More have been assisted since that date.

Canada's Big Wool Clip

The 1919 wool clip of Canada is likely to be the largest in ten years, its estimation to exceed 12,000,000 pounds.

Great Power Plant at Padua, Italy, Collapses

By International News Service.

Rome, Oct. 31.—The great hydro-electric station of Padua collapsed today as a result of the weakening of the foundation by bombs dropped by Austrian airmen during the war, and the city is without water or light.

The foundation, which was on granite blocks, toppled into the Piovego Canal. The damage is estimated at 2,000,000 lire. The city is twenty-two miles southwest of Venice, and has a population of 85,000.

Dies Suddenly in Street

Jeremiah Manning, fifty-six, of No. 871 Broadway, Chelsea, was found at the corner of Fifth and Addison streets, Chelsea, in an unconscious condition. He was rushed in the police ambulance to the Frost Hospital, where he was found dead on arrival. Heart failure is the attributed cause.

BURGALRS STEAL DOG IN POLICEMAN'S HOME

Portsmouth, N. H., Oct. 31.—The police today are searching for burglars who entered four residences in this city securing a large amount of loot and taking a watchdog. The dog, a collie, was stolen from the home of Ray Blaney, No. 11 Rhyno avenue, a special policeman, who was away at the time. The other victims were Leon Robichaud, No. 60 Lincoln avenue; John Pender, Highland street; ex-mayor and sheriff, and John E. Bates, No. 111 South street, president of the First National Bank.

DIVORCES ARMY OFFICER FOR NONSUPPORT

Wife of Lieut. Charles McKinley Also Given Custody of Two Children

Mrs. Vivian McKinley was granted a divorce and custody of their two children from Lieutenant Charles McKinley in the divorce sessions of Suffolk County superior court today. The husband served in France with the American army and is now stationed at Newport News.

The McKinleys were married on January 26, 1915, and lived at No. 3120 Massachusetts avenue. In the summer of 1918 the wife went to Coast to visit friends and when she returned, she said, found that her husband had removed a number of her personal belongings. Two weeks later, she said, they met in a downtown hotel and his attitude was such that she preferred charges of nonsupport against him.

While he was in the Expeditionary Forces, she said, she received from him a monthly allowance of $75. Her statements were corroborated by her mother and brother, Walter Bushby of Jamaica Plain, with whom she has resided since the separation.

$2,000,000 PLEDGED TO STEEL STRIKERS

New York, Oct. 31.—Union labor leaders have pledged $2,000,000 to aid the striking steel workers in their battle against the United States Steel Corporation, it was learned today. How the money will be raised was not announced. It is probable that unions will be called on to give two hours' wages to a fund to help the cause.

Britain Benefited by Strike, Says Thomas

By J. H. THOMAS, M. P.,
Secretary of the National Union of the Railway Men and director of the recent nation-wide strike in Great Britain.

(Written for the International News Service.)

London, Oct. 31.—The British people, fairly emerged from the recent great industrial upheaval as they emerged from the late war, stronger, better, and, if I may say so, an example to the whole world.

We have shown that even when we were on the brink of civil war, and in an industrial dispute, not only unprecedented in the world's history, but which is, in effect, might have shaken the constitution of the country, on both sides there was only one predominant thought—to secure justice for all, but save the nation.

RAILWAY MEN LOYAL.

The railway men of this country, whose services during the war are well known, were never called to be called Anarchists or Bolsheviks. They have proved that there is no body of trade unionists so determined to be loyal to their leaders as the railway workers. The very nature of their work breeds discipline. They are not an irresponsible mob.

No greater hero was prime at this moment than the able suggestion of Sir Auckland Geddes, minister of labor, to prevent strikes. The railway men can prove that any such remedy as this is not only doomed to failure, but would be fatal if introduced.

The power of striking will never be taken from the working classes; it is their only bargaining power.

No, it is not along this line that we must travel if we look for a real remedy.

CRISIS PROMPT DECISION.

The first I suggest is, whether the employer be private or the government, exhaust efforts at adjustment and settlement at the earliest possible stage of the dispute. Delay and procrastination irritate and add to the men's minds that it is merely an attempt to deprive them of their rights.

The second trade must have a national council with equal numbers from both sides. To give an organization full local powers to deal with a local grievance, each appoint an equal number to a board to deal with it, under rules of working conditions already and freely recognizing that the thing which affects the business is of as much interest to the men as to the employers.

This will give confidence. This will enable the employer to be brought face to face with the men's point of view. It will enable him to understand and appreciate to the full extent of the difficulties of manufacture. There must also arise issues that perhaps both sides would not agree upon and for which the public would be affected before the dispute took place.

Why not have a panel of all sections where both sides if they desired could call in the assistance of some body who represented everybody. Not to act as arbitrator, but with plenary power to settle, but with one object, to endeavor to help effect a settlement.

In short, I am for every means being resorted to a strike. That must be the last weapon to be used, but being ever in reserve it will help toward agreement.

FEARS LITTLE DANGER FROM 'PHONE GERMS

Health Commissioner Woodward Declares New York Official's Idea Exaggerated

When fair Charlie steps into a telephone booth, rings up her friend and begins, "Say, Mayme, I'ought to the swell guy I was with last night," and keeps this on until she has exhausted her vocabulary and every one's store of endearments, is she in danger of having the bloom of her youthful complexion from the millions of germs that await her in the booth?

"She is," says Health Commissioner Copeland of New York.

"The danger is very much exaggerated," says Commissioner Woodward of Boston.

Copeland declares the telephone service a menace to health because of delays, the air-filled germs of the mouths and the other germs that cling to the transmitter. Dr. Woodward takes issue with him.

"The likelihood of infection from telephone transmitters is very slight," says Dr. Woodward. "People who handle the telephone instruments and put their fingers to their mouth and nose run some risk. To avoid it personal cleanliness is all that is necessary.

"There is little danger from breathing the air in a telephone booth. We have never traced a case of influenza to it. And in order to avoid breathing in any germs that might cling to the transmitter the person should stand at a reasonable distance, or about two inches from the mouthpiece.

"The evidence shows that the danger to health from telephoning is very slight, even when there are long delays, and I am not at all alarmed about any effect it will have on the people of Boston."

Protest Union Jack Presentation to R. I. Normal School

Providence, Oct. 31.—The union jack has started a furore in certain circles of Providence, all because Captain H. G. Armstrong, the British consul general at Boston, presented the British flag to the Rhode Island Normal School. The emblem was accepted in spite of a protest by part of the faculty.

Some of the teachers believe that old glory should be the only standard of the normal school while others contend that the presentation of the British flag was only a token of recognition from the British government.

Mrs. Anne McCarthy, state vice-president of the Women's Auxiliary of the A. O. H., led the protest at the presentation ceremony held in Infantry Hall, where 2,000 teachers had gathered for an Americanization meeting.

Captain Armstrong told of the English celebration of July 8, 1775, in which the Stars and Stripes floated over the House of Parliament on a level with the Union Jack, an honor, he said, never accorded another nation.

Nasty Colds

Get instant relief with "Pape's Cold Compound"

Don't stay stuffed up. Quit blowing and snuffling. A few doses of Pape's Cold Compound checks grippe misery until you can work or go to bed. It opens up the clogged nostrils and ends all grippe misery.

The very first dose opens your stopped-up head; the air passages of the head clear up instantly; the dull headache, dizziness, biliousness, sick stomach and sneezing spells cease.

Pape's Cold Compound is the quickest relief in the world and costs only a few cents at any drug store. It acts without assistance. Easter it. Don't accept substitute. Insist on Pape's. Advertisement.

FIX STOMACH RIGHT UP

"Pape's Diapepsin" at once ends Indigestion, Gases, Sourness, Acidity

You don't have to wait a few minutes when your stomach is full of sour, upset food, or an attack of indigestion, dyspepsia or your stomach is too valuable, you must not injure it with drastic drugs.

When your meals don't fit and you feel uncomfortable, when gases, acids or raw sour and gassy food. When you feel lumps of indigestion pain, heartburn or headache from acidity, just eat a tablet of Pape's Diapepsin and the stomach distress is gone.

Millions of people know the magic of Pape's Diapepsin as an antacid. They know that indigestion and disordered stomach are needless. The relief comes quickly. It's a scientific, safe compound, and they cost so little. Do—Advertisement.

Catarrhal Deafness and Head Noises

TELLS SAFE AND SIMPLE WAY TO TREAT AND RELIEVE AT HOME

If you have catarrh catarrhal deafness or head noises caused by catarrh of the nasal passages, your throat and lungs, caused catarrh of the stomach or bowels, you will be glad to know that these distressing symptoms may be relieved, sometimes in many instances by the soothing treatment which you can easily prepare in your own home at little cost. Simply get some druggist a bottle of Parmint (Double Strength). Take this home and add to it a pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day. An improvement is sometimes noted after the first day's treatment. Breathing should become easy, while the distressing head noises, headaches, dizziness, colds, catarrh, should gradually disappear as the inflammation from the mucous membranes of the throat, nose, head, throat, bronchial tubes and other air passages is relieved. The presence of catarrh and when nature often helps to overcome by this old simple treatment. It is said that catarrh, simply the result of a few troubles are caused by catarrh and there must therefore be many people whose hearing may be restored by this simple, harmless, home treatment.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How to Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly one-half of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sour stomach, gas, bloating, heart pain, etc., are due to an excess of acid in the stomach and not, as some believe, to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated if digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This neutralizes the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acids and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia in powder or tablet form (never in liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach and may be taken any time, by those of your form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who think their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

POWERFUL PILE REMEDY DISCOVERED

Has Never Failed to End Most Obstinate Case of Piles in Few Days

For years it has been proved that so-called external remedies applied to or inserted in the rectum cannot cure piles and at the best can only give temporary relief. Surgical operations also often remove these rather than stop the formation.

The wonderful prescription known as Mi-ro Pile Remedy is now offered in the treatment of piles, even in the most severe cases of 20 to 30 years' standing with great success. It has been completely received from three to ten days. The first few days' doses of a carefully balanced prescription and the most persistent case of piles is absorbed never to return.

The Mi-ro Pile Remedy is sold by Lee and Roxbury Crossing dispensaries, or can get it for you on short notice. Stop at a north the little trouble to obtain it to be rid of piles forever.

IMPORTANT—While as known as itching piles are only a symptom of the word although in most cases this action may accompany a true case of piles. For this reason Mi-ro Pile Ointment has been prepared as in such cases it is not necessary to take the internal prescription.—Advertisement.

GABY'S GONE, SO NEW YORK UNTIES PURSE-STRINGS

Gaby Deslys, who left for France, and the Duc de Crussol, who arrived here on the same vessel with her recently. They are saying goodbye before her departure from New York. The Duc will remain in America indefinitely.

New York, Oct. 31—There was a clicking of time locks and safe plungers all over New York today when the bankers and theatrical people were assured Gaby Deslys had sailed for France.

Gaby is the lady you know that made former King Manuel of Portugal hock his kingly jewels to keep her supplied in ermine trimmed lingerie and furbelows.

Gaby came over here a couple of weeks ago with about the same secrecy as one of those European financiers who were here some time to loan them a couple of billions for some god-forsaken tribe of savages in the Balkan region. She finally announced she am over for the sole purpose of making some dreams, cash, coin of the realm.

She started on one of the local theatrical circuits. Now a modern theatre manager is perfectly willing Gaby or any other star should roll around in velvet lined limousines, have a pair of pearls, eat robins' wings on toast, have puff balls or do any other publicity stunt as long as he gets the gate receipts other than the aforesaid manager to pay for the checks.

But Gaby not only wanted the foods the pearls and the limousines. She wanted them to carry her money around on a receipted bill of sale.

Which was too much for any theatrical manager. They remembered Manhattan's experience and ordered the stenographer to lock the safe. They then set the time lock so it wouldn't open until after Gaby had sailed back for her dear Paris.

It's the way Jewel sez Gaby. Yet as the poor grafter sees her offer to leave she has to wait until the safe explodes in love with pay. Thus is the way of the world as it is and there's no use to kick.

Between receiving word Manny is no throne and they was lost he Gaby he lost all on much as the guy did who voted for Taft in 1912.

MILDRED G. CARTER OF SOMERVILLE TO WED

Miss Mildred Gordon Carter of Somerville and Newton M. Perkins of Madison, Ga., formerly of the U. S. S. Mt Vernon will be married tomorrow. The five-day law was waived by Chief Supervisor of the Somerville court. They will be married by Rev. Chester A. Drummond, pastor of the First Universalist church of Somerville, at his home, No. 29 Central street. The bride is the daughter of Captain and Mrs. Eugene A. Carter, her father being a member of the Somerville police force. They will reside in Madison, Ga.

SOMERVILLE TRUANTS PUT IN STATE SCHOOL

Two and Arthur Marotto, truants whose mother was forced to be them to church, were today committed to the North Chelmsford Training School. The boys failed to keep their promise to return to school after the Somerville court on Tuesday. Judge Sherwood, for the past two years, has had boys who are nine and ten years old. The boys have been living with their mother.

YOUR GOVERNOR

is not merely the candidate of a political party in this contest in Massachusetts.

He is the candidate of all the people of Massachusetts who believe in law and order.

He stood in the breach when law and order were attacked.

He stood for you, citizens of Massachusetts, not as Democrats or Republicans, not as Capitalists or Laborers, not as Union men or Non-union men, but as citizens entitled to protection under the authority of your government.

It is the highest duty now of every good citizen to back him up in that stand.

Remember

The forces seeking the defeat of Calvin Coolidge are, consciously or unconsciously, seeking the defeat of law and order.

Their success would be accepted by the red radicals of the land as proof that the people of Massachusetts had repudiated their own government.

Calvin Coolidge's re-election by an overwhelming majority will be proof to all that the people of Massachusetts will permit no attack upon their sovereign authority.

Calvin Coolidge

Stands for a government founded upon truth and justice, and against a government founded upon terrorism, political mendacity and reckless promises.

He stands for Americanism.

Every Massachusetts voter who believes in Americanism, who believes in law and order as essential to liberty, should defend that belief with his ballot. Vote for

MIXED FOURSOME TO BE HELD AT CHESTNUT HILL TUESDAY

By ROBERT E. HARLOW.

The current golf season is somewhat similar to one of those poker games which is scheduled to end positively at 1 a. m., so the visiting club can catch the last train. At 4 a. m. the poker players persist. The only difference is the players do not have to be cared to the game by the chauffeur of rescuing losses.

What was described as the first mixed foursome of the season was played at Chestnut Hill today with full attendance. It has been announced that Tuesday, next the first, men and women will have another opportunity, this time at the Chestnut Hill Golf Club.

The arrangement was made at the weekly meeting of the Women's Golf Association at Brae Burn. Eight members were entered in the event, two pairs played in the morning, some at Wollaston and some at Arlington, and Chestnut Hill was the Dorchesters.

The women had agreed to play at Brae Burn. Forty-two holes at match play, two rounds of 18 holes, one mid-afternoon with the same men partners, or extra holes played, one of the close contests was won by Mrs. Leo Durfee, the Brae Burn club women's champion, who with Miss E. Jackson Gordon, the Providence champion, at the twenty-sixth hole.

CLOSE ALL THE WAY.

The women played from the white teeings so that Miss Gordon was not a stroke on the fifty-seventh and fourteenth. The match was all square on the long green, after each had a five to Mrs. Durfee's six. This brought the match to the home green all square. Mrs. Durfee's second was on the green in 2 and Miss Gordon's in 3. Mrs. Durfee's putt for a 4 was short and Miss Gordon's for a 3 was good.

HAD BEST MEDAL SCORE.

Miss Gordon had the distinction of getting the best medal score of the day for the 36 holes, with 84. Mrs. Durfee was but 4 stroke behind her, and Miss Jackson was picked up at the finish.

The Ladies' Golf Club of Hollis was represented by a team of four players in the match against the Women's Golf Association at Brae Burn. Miss Mabel Morton, Miss Ethel Arnold, Miss Mabel Morton and Miss Edith Arnold were the players. The Hollis team won by a score of 3 to 1. Miss Morton defeated Miss Durfee, 3 and 2; Miss Arnold defeated Miss Gordon, 3 and 2; Miss Morton defeated Miss Gordon, 3 and 2, and Miss Durfee defeated Miss Arnold, 1 up.

MALDEN TESTS STRENGTH OF SOMERVILLE

The game this afternoon at Malden between Somerville and Malden High school, will be the first of a series of the scheduled games. Not only the interscholastic championship but also a great deal of interest in perfecting their team work is expected to result from the series.

Malden has won the championship for the last two years and has a fine record to uphold. Somerville has been defeated by Malden in the last two games played between the two schools, but the Somerville team has been showing up well in practice and will be out to win this game.

Both teams have been practicing hard for the game and will be in fine condition. Coach McLaughlin has the Malden team in fine shape and will use the other backs who have been showing up well in practice in a satisfactory manner.

Captain Hayes and Lenore Hall will form a strong pair for the Everett Athletic Field. While Everett should be the favorite, Cambridge fans have noticed the improvement in the Somerville team since the game with Everett and will be out to see the game. The only other Suburban League game will be at Medford between Brookline and Medford. Brookline is at the bottom of the list, having lost all its league games. Medford will have but little trouble getting the big end of the score.

The college freshman teams will get interested with five games scheduled. Harvard plays Tufts and Syracuse will be represented by their freshman teams. Harvard plays at Andover, Tech meets the Worcester Tech freshmen, Dartmouth travels to Amherst, Brown plays at Providence and Yale goes to Princeton for the freshman game.

POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT. POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT. POLITICAL ADVERTISEMENT.

HUMANITY VS. PRUSSIANISM

The Police were wrong in striking. They have been punished. Their families have been punished.

But How About Governor Coolidge?

The Committee of 34 were satisfied that they had found a satisfactory solution comporting with the dignity of the State. Coolidge repudiated this solution.
The Mayor demanded protection for the City. Curtis told him to mind his own business and gave out that there was ample force to protect Boston.

Governor Coolidge Refused to Give Protection.

The City was left unprotected and disorder followed.
Only then could Mayor Peters order out the soldiers. Two days later when order had been restored by the Mayor, Coolidge waved him aside and began to pose as an exponent of "law and order."
Governor Coolidge violated his oath of office by refusing protection and risking disorder and the deaths that followed.

Why?

Was it the work of Herbert Parker, corporation attorney, to create political capital for a weak Governor?
Was it a Gary inspired "plant" to confuse the people and discredit honest labor?
Governor Coolidge has dragged the fair name of Boston and Massachusetts into disgrace for political gain.
Governors of outside States are imported to charge the majority of our citizens with being "anarchists" and "Reds."
Coolidge represents the Prussian idea of law and order. Human rights do not count. Free speech on the streets of Boston is denied.
These are not personal attacks on Coolidge. His public acts and those of his supporters condemn him.
The cry of "law and order" under the circumstances is an insult to the people's intelligence and patriotism. It is like Coal Baron Baer's claim of Divine Right to run the mines. It arrogates to a political party the sole desire for orderly Government. It is the refuge of a public official, whose public acts are coming back to punish him.
The voters will repudiate Coolidge and the corrupt interests supporting him and dictating his acts.

Massachusetts Voters Need No Instructions from Outside Governors and Politicians as to How to Run Their Affairs.

Massachusetts can take care of herself. She is for Law and Order, but above all for humanity, justice and contentment of the people.
On Tuesday the voters will restore the good name of Massachusetts and end the power of the corrupt interests within her borders. They will elect a business-man as Governor, who knows the humane, truly American way to satisfy legitimate aspirations of the workers, without bloodshed, and with full respect for law, order and the rights of humanity.

That Man Is RICHARD H. LONG.

MANY LIQUOR DEALERS TIED DOWN BY LEASES

Providence, R. I., Oct. 31.—Whether they can be held responsible for leases is a question bothering Providence saloon keepers. The liquor dealers feel since they have been put out of business with no consent of their own through the prohibition law they cannot properly be held to leases. Various dealers hold leases which have from four to seven years to run.

PRINCE ON LAST LEG OF CANADIAN TRIP

Montreal, Oct. 31.—An arduous program of official visits and ceremonies marked the arrival of Wales on the last leg of his Canadian tour.

His itinerary included a visit to the National Club, Notre Dame de Grace, where he unveiled a soldiers' memorial tablet, and a trip to Verdun, a suburb of Montreal.

A Community of Black Cats

"THE Island of Black Cats" is a name applied to Chatham Island in the Pacific Ocean. It is overrun with black cats; indeed, cats of no other color are seen there. These animals live in the crevices of the lava foundation near the coast and subsist by catching fish and crabs, instead of rats and mice.

The Wicked Marquis

By E. PHILLIPS OPPENHEIM

Love and Revenge Centre About an Agreeable English Aristocrat of the Old School

What Has Happened

The Marquis of Mandeleys, an English nobleman of a type of days gone by, finds himself nearly bankrupt from law cases against Richard Vont, the occupant of a cottage on his estate who refuses to vacate his own property. The Marquis' solicitor informs him that the sum of eighteen thousand pounds is needed to settle the court bills and that it would be useless to make another appeal, even to the House of Lords. David Thain, a young American millionaire, protege of the Duchess, is introduced to the Marquis. The Marquis relates to Thain how he took the daughter of Vont away with him. Thain is given a dinner party, after which the Marquis tells Thain he would like to make a million dollars without trouble to himself and with no chance of loss. Thain suggests oil stock. Marcia, Vont's daughter, tells her publisher, James Borden, that she cannot marry him. The Marquis tells his solicitor that he has bought 40,000 pounds worth of oil shares. Thain leases an estate from the Marquis near Mandeleys. Marcia meets Thain and feels a strange excitement.

"MY dear Marcia," he said, "you have spoken the word. More than once lately I have fancied that I noticed indications of this desire on your part. I am glad, therefore, that you have spoken. Dine with your publisher by all means, and lunch with Mr. Hyde. Take to yourself that greater measure of liberty which is only too natural that you should covet. We will look upon it as a brief vacation, which certainly, after all these years, you have earned. When you have made up your mind, write to me. I shall await your letter with interest."

"But you mean that you are not coming down to see me before then?" she asked, a little tremulously.

"I think it would be better not," he decided. "I have kept you to myself very stringently, Marcia. You see, I recognize this, and I set you free for a time."

He paid the bill, and they left the room together.

"You are coming home?" she whispered, as they passed down the vestibule.

He shook his head.

"Not tonight, if you will excuse me, Marcia," he said. "There is a meeting of the committee at my club."

They were on the pavement. She gripped his hand.

"Do come!" she begged.

He handed her in with a smile.

"You will go down to Hattersea, James," he told the chauffeur, "and fetch me afresh rug from the club."

A queer feeling caught at her as the car glided off and left him standing there, bareheaded. It was the first time—she felt something like the snap of a chain in her heart—the first time in all these years! Yet she never for a moment deceived herself. The tears which stood in her eyes, the pain in her heart, were for him.

CHAPTER XV.

THE Duchess, a few morning later, leaned back in her car and watched the perilous progress of her footman, dodging in and out of the traffic in the widest part of Piccadilly. He returned presently in safety, escorting the object of his quest. The Duchess pointed to the seat by her side.

"Can I take you or drop you anywhere?" she asked. "Please don't look as though you had been taken into custody. I saw you in the distance, walking aimlessly along, and I really wanted to talk to you."

David for a moment indulged in the remains of what was almost a boyish resentment.

"I have to go to the Savoy," he explained, "and I was rather intending to walk across St. James' Park."

"You can walk after your lunch," she insisted. "If you walk before, it gives you too much of an appetite—afterwards, it helps your digestion, so get in with me, and I will drive you to the Savoy."

He took his place by her side with a distinct air of resignation. The Duchess laughed at him.

"You are a very silly person to dislike other people so," she admonished. "If you begin to give way to misanthropy at your time of life, you will be a withered up old stick when no one will want to be decent to, except to get your money out of, before you're fifty. Don't you know that the society of human beings is good for you?"

"There isn't a medicine in the world one can't take too much of," David ventured, smiling in spite of himself.

"To the Savoy, John," his mistress directed. "Tell Miles to drive slowly. To abandon abstruse discussions," she continued, leaning back, "have you regarded my warning?"

"Which one?" he demanded.

"I mean with reference to my brother. I happen to have come across him once or twice, during the last few days. On Wednesday he was in the most buoyant spirits—for him. He had the air of a man who has accomplished some great feat. If you could have seen how amusing Reginald is at such times! His manner isn't in the least different, but you know perfectly well that he is thinking himself one of the most brilliant creatures ever born. There is a note of the finest and most delicate condescension in the way he speaks. I am perfectly certain that if he had happened to come across the Chancellor of the Exchequer on Wednesday, he would have discussed finance with him in a patronizing manner, and probably offered him a few hints as to how to reduce the national debt."

Different Man

"On Wednesday this was," David murmured.

"And on Friday," the Duchess continued, "he was a different man. He carried himself exactly as usual, but his footsteps were falling little lead. He looked over the eyes of every one, and there was that queer, gray look in his face which helps one to remember that, notwithstanding his figure, he is nearly sixty years old. What have you been doing to him, Mr. Thain?"

"Nothing that would account for his latter state," David assured her.

"When did you see him last?" she asked.

"On Thursday."

"Where?"

David hesitated.

"At Trewly's Restaurant."

"He was lunching or dining with some one?"

"Dining."

The Duchess nodded.

"Of course! With a lady, wasn't it?"

"Is this a fair cross-examination?" David protested.

"My dear Mr. Thain, don't be absurd," his companion admonished. "Every one in London and out of it has known of my brother's friendship with Marcia Hannaway for years. As a matter of fact, we all approve of it immensely. The young woman, although she must be getting on now, is a very clever writer, and I think that his influence and her good sense upon Reginald, throughout his life, has been an excellent one. So that was Thursday night, eh?"

David assented. He was looking out of the window of the car, as though interested in the passing throngs.

"I will tell you something," the Duchess continued. "You have heard, I dare say, of the lawsuits down at Mandeleys, and of that keeper's cottage within a hundred yards from Vont's lawn, and of the old man Vont, who has come back just as bitter as ever? That girl is his daughter."

"The Marquis seems to have displayed the most extraordinary fidelity," David remarked.

"My dear Mr. Thain," was the emphatic reply, "they have been the making of one another's lives. It is the sort of thing one reads more of in French memoirs than meets with in actual life, but I can assure you that Reginald would be absolutely miserable without her, and she—well, see what she has become through his influence and companionship. Yet they tell me that that old man has come back to his ridiculous cottage, and sits there in the front garden, reading the Bible and blasting the very gooseberry bushes with his curses against Reginald. Most uncomfortable it will be, I should think, when you all get down there."

"Nothing that you have said alters the fact," David reminded her, "that Vont's daughter has been all her life, and is today, in an invidious situation with regard to your brother."

No Disadvantage

The Duchess' eyebrows were slightly raised.

"And why not?" she asked, in genuine surprise. "Of course, I don't claim to be so absolutely feudal in my ideas as Reginald, but I still cannot find the slightest disadvantage which has accrued to the young woman from her position."

"I have been brought up myself in a different school," David said quietly, "in the school Richard Vont was brought up in. I see no difference fundamentally between a Marquis and a gamekeeper, and to me the womenkind of the gamekeeper should be as sacred to the Marquis as the womenkind of the Marquis to the gamekeeper."

The Duchess laughed good-humoredly.

"I have always insisted," she declared, "that America is the most backward country in the world. So many of you come to Europe now, though, that one would have thought you would have attained to a most correct perspective of life. But you are certainly much more amusing as you are. No, be quiet, please," she went on. "I didn't call for you to enter into general discussions. I just wanted to know about Reginald. Of course, you have discovered already that I am ridiculously fond of him, and I am trying to find out what is depressing him so much. Do you know what I am most afraid of?"

"I have no idea," David confessed. "The workings of your mind seem to lead you to such unexpected conclusions."

New Method of Reducing Fat

A news item from abroad informs us that the American method of producing a slim, trim figure is meeting with astonishing success. This system, which has made such a wonderful impression over there, must be the Marmola Prescription Tablet which we have nothing better to say than we have nothing better for this purpose in this country. Anything that will reduce the excess flesh two or three or four pounds a week, without injury to the stomach, the cause of wrinkles with the help of exercise or dieting, or interferences with one's meals is a most important and useful addition to civilization's necessities. Just such a combination of good results, however, is the sum of these pleasant, harmless and economical little tablets. Moreover, so economical because Marmola Prescription Tablets (made in accordance with the famous prescription) can be obtained from any druggist or the Marmola Prescription Co., 854 Woodward Ave., Detroit, Mich., for one dollar. The extra saving in money is decidedly economical when considering the number of tablets each case contains. They are harmless.

"HOW generous you are to me," replied Valerie Cosby—honey sweet—as she narrowed her eyes and fixed them on me with a half smile. "You seem inand to give me the very things I want—first this wonderful robe, now its first theatre party in the new home city. What next, I wonder? You mustn't disappoint me—I'm counting on your generosity.

"That's delightful!" And Mr. Mason plus half a dozen or so to fill two boxes," I said in a voice I tried to keep as unruffled as hers. "Now—I must deprive you of something. My own charming society —and my husband's. It's about morning and everyone is going. "Why, Jim—and we'll all go home together," pouted Valerie squinting her eyes and giggling as she reported. "Jim . . . Coms . . . Jim . . . stay Jim."

"The 'stay Jims' have it," laughed Jim, lounging down in a seat next to Valerie. "I promised Conny we'd stick to the last, Anne. And then I'm giving a little party ahead of your Thursday one . . . Griddle cakes and scrambled eggs and coffee—a breakfast at Will's. Are you on, Tom?"

"You couldn't pry me loose," returned Tom, pulling my arm through his. "Anne and I are booked for this treat."

In the corridor, just at the top of the stairs leading to the floor, he stopped.

"Steady, Anne—steady!" he said. "Want a bite of salad or a bird?"

"I couldn't eat," I replied, with my best approximation of his steady."

He laughed shortly.

"You ought to know Jim by this time—a new face, a new fancy."

"I know Jim, and I know you," I said coldly. "You're not coming to that Thursday night box party—except for business, you're never going to speak to me again."

"Oh, see, I'm coming. You cased me in the presence of Miss Cosby and Jim Little Lisse Lady, don't let Jemmy drive you into a taxicome, Cosby knew you were going to be of me earlier in the evening. And You coming in rather handy now at that. What would you have done without me back there to the box?"

"You're insufferable," I gasped.

"And you're adorable."

Tom Mason breathed it thickly and before the words were more than half said, he caught me in some like steel and drew me to him.

"Let me go, let me go," I cried, beating at his chest with my clenched fist.

I felt his lips close to my cheek, and then, somehow, I tore myself from his arms, scudded down the steps across the lower hall and into the dressing room.

Panting, I sank down on a couch. A second later Valerie Cosby glided into the room.

"Why did you run away so suddenly?" she cooed, looking at me in my greatest astonishment.

I stared back at her with sheerly that I felt crimsoning in spite of my determination not to blush. Did she mean to ask why I had run away from her or Jim—or why I had fled from Tom Mason? What had she seen? How and she interfered?

"Come on, Donna Anne, to the breakfast at Willis," she said, using Tom Mason's name for me with the utmost suavity. "You and I are going to be great friends as soon as you limber up a bit. We have such a lot in common."

Again like slow, narrow-lidded smile. I thought of a kitten lapping up cream.

STOMACH UPSET?

Get at the Real Cause—Take Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets

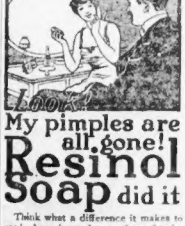
That's what thousands of stomach sufferers are doing now. Instead of taking tonics, or trying to patch up poor digestion, they are attacking the real cause of the ailment—clogged liver and disordered bowels.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets arouse the liver in a soothing, healing way. When the liver and bowels are performing their natural functions, gas goes, indigestion and stomach troubles.

Have you a bad taste, coated tongue, poor appetite, a lazy, don't-care feeling, no ambition or energy, trouble with undigested foods? Take Olive Tablets, the substitute for calomel.

Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets are a purely vegetable compound mixed with olive oil. You will know them by their olive color. They do the work without griping, cramps or pain.

Take one or two at bedtime for quick relief. Eat what you like. 10c and 30c.



My pimples are all gone! Resinol Soap did it

Think what a difference it makes to me! A week ago I was ashamed to be seen. When I did go out, people seemed to avoid me. But now that Resinol Soap—with just a little Resinol Ointment—has given me back my good complexion, I am ready for anything.

All druggists sell Resinol Soap and Ointment.

A Daily Recipe

By MONSIEUR CHARLES A. PERRAUDIN, Delmonico's Chef

Filet of Lemon Sole au Gratin

Have a fresh lemon sole (or flounder) weighing about two pounds, take off and skin the fillets by them flat on a gratin dish previously buttered. With the bones, make a broth seasoned with salt, pepper, little sliced onion and carrot, some celery leaves, and parsley root, a small bay leaf and a clove. In a separate saucepan cook two tablespoonfuls of sifted flour in two ounces of butter for about six minutes on a slow fire, not letting it brown. Moisten with your strained broth, stirring consistently to make a smooth sauce; drop in it three or four sliced fresh mushrooms and let cook for fifteen minutes; this sauce should be of a nice consistency. Pour it over the fish, sprinkle with breadcrumbs and cook slowly for fifteen minutes in a moderate oven; a little lemon juice, just before serving, will improve the taste.

Household Suggestions

Copper kettles or other utensils that have become tarnished or blackened by contact with the fire are easily cleaned with a lemon cut in half. Rub the salt and lemon over the surface of the metal, which, however, is speedily rinsed with water to prevent the acid from eating into it.

* * *

Ants can be driven away and soon the nest will begin to rot, and a simple and easy way to lighten the cake is merely to wash it with very hot water and leave it to dry.

* * *

Instead of peeling potatoes for steaming or boiling, simply cut a narrow strip entirely around the centre. Cook and after being cooked drained and dried in the oven, they will be delicious and easily eaten from the peeling when the potatoes are cooked between the thumb and forefinger.

A splendid home remedy for preventing forgetfulness may be made from one ounce of bone, washed shredded, half an ounce of Castile soap, and an ounce of Castile soap. Mix these ingredients with half a pint of turpentine and half a pint of boiling water.

AN OLD RECIPE TO DARKEN HAIR

Almost everyone knows that Sage Tea and Sulphur, properly compounded, brings back the natural color and lustre to the hair when it is streaked or gray. Years ago the only way to get this mixture was to make it at home, which is mussy and stains the hands.

Nowadays we simply ask at any drug store for "Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound" and in a few moments a large bottle of this old-time recipe, improved by the addition of other ingredients, at very little cost, is ready for use. Thousands of folks know from experience that no one can possibly tell that you darkened your hair, as it does it so naturally and evenly. You dampen a sponge or soft brush with it and draw this through your hair, taking one small strand at a time; by morning the gray hair disappears, and after another application or two your hair becomes beautifully dark, thick and glossy and you look years younger. Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Compound is a delightful toilet requisite. It is not intended for the cure, mitigating or prevention of disease.—Advertisement.

Check and Abort a Bad Cold

In Five Hours with MENTHO-LAXENE

You Buy It Concentrated and Mix With Pint of Syrup

Luxurious Wraps

By Rita Stuyvesant

Noted Writer on Fashions for Youth and Middle Age

THE possibilities for creating the most luxurious wraps for the first Fall days are unlimited when one considers the wide variety of exquisite materials combined with beautiful warm face that are offered this season. The cold days of late Autumn have brought out a number of gorgeous creations, for it is now quite the mode for middle-aged and aged to be gorgeously frock and brave the sharp winds without a wrap to envelop her delicate self.

That a designer "strikes" on a combination of Bohemian red and American russet does not warrant alarm, but reflects unusual charm, and this has been proven in a stunning wrap recently seen on the Avenue. The wrap had a strong tendency toward the dolman, not a new mode, but yet a pleasing one. The effect was decidedly full, but showed the narrow at the ankle cut. The wrap was comfortably collared with the popular fur, and one would have to search for anything more distinctive.

The smart Parisienne goes on her way wrapped in a mantean of rafe-as-air pom-pom cloth lavishly embroidered in. When one finds silver threads among the cloth it is not to be regretted, especially when they trace their silver beauty into an exhaustive design that borders the wrap.

Midnight blue velvet and squirrel for fashioned a magnificent cape for smart afternoon festivities and quite rich enough for evening wear. It featured the deep-fitted yoke that allows the dainty slim shoulder to peep. The lower part fell gracefully, shirred on a heavy cord, and there were scarf ends for the arms to pass through. A gauntlet-shaped collar of squirrel finished the cape, and when the wind blew the wrap an attractive blue and gold silk lining was revealed.

A two-tone fabric cape that one loves in spite of its duplicity shows tan brocade on one side and lustrous black satin on the other. For days when one cannot decide on the color to choose, but ever the right dance frock or dainty afternoon dress it shows to advantage on either side.

A wrap that is draped in quite an unsophisticated manner is of plum-colored cloth with sleeves cut in one. The cape is cut in a full circle figure, but narrows fashionably at the foot. One wonders when she sees this wrap how it is made, for the severely tailored lapboards of outer-wear, so slim of line and trim of waist.

The Kindly Shade

A very smart old lady, strolling in a park on a very hot day, became aware that she was being followed by a tramp. "What do you mean by following me, sir?" she asked indignantly. The tramp looked back a little, but when the aged one saw that there was no acute look up his position and crafty behind her. "Look here," she exclaimed angrily, "if you don't go away I shall call a policeman." "For Heaven's sake, kind lady," urged the tramp, looking at her appealingly, "have mercy and don't call a policeman. You're the only shady spot in the whole park."

Just Like All Women!

A married man who imbibed another and told him a terrible scandal. "Don't let this go any farther, George," he said. "No, certainly not," said the other. "But how is it you know so much?" "Why, from the wife, of course," was the answer. "She's just like all women—can't keep a secret."

EDITORIAL PAGE OF THE BOSTON AMERICAN OCTOBER 31, 1919 BOSTON

American Legion Is Right in Preparedness Plan

The convention of the American Legion—soldiers in the late war with Germany—which recently met in Worcester, passed some very significant resolutions. The most important resolution probably was this relating to universal military training:

We have had a bitter experience in the cost of unpreparedness for national defence and of the lack of proper training on the part of officers and men, and we realize the necessity of an immediate revision of our military system and a thorough housecleaning in our entire professional military establishment.

We therefore favor a national military system based on universal military obligation, to include a relatively small regular army and a citizen army capable of rapid expansion in meeting any national emergency, on a plan providing competitive and progressive training for all officers, both of the regular army and of the citizen forces.

But it is the sense of this convention that such military system be subject to civil authority. Any legislation tending toward an enlarged and stronger military caste we unqualifiedly condemn.

This resolution is sound. If any demonstration is needed of the utter futility of pacifism and the folly of relying on the good will of aggressive nations that demonstration is being made to us now every day.

For four long years we had dinned into our ears day and night the claim that the nations which were fighting Germany were fighting only to make the world safe for democracy, were fighting not for selfish interests, but to defend themselves and the world against the attempt at world domination by Germany and Austria-Hungary.

There is no question about the crimes of Germany. We are considering now only the pretensions of our side. We were told that the Entente Powers sought no territorial aggrandizement, sought no spoils of war, but only peace based upon justice and upon the recognition that every people has a right to determine its own form of government without interference from stronger neighbors.

Now that the war is won, we see the "old order of things" in full operation—conquerors standing forth with features as wolfish as ever we cartooned the Germans, and seizing spoils as ravenously as ever we charged the Germans of intending to do.

The high professions of morality and justice uttered by President Wilson with such moving force during the war were formally adopted by our associates and they became the basis legally of the peace settlements.

But at the peace table wherever those high professions of morality and noble unselfishness interfered with the special interests of a victorious nation the high moralities and noble unselfishness were sacrificed. There was an international expression of idealism in words for the future, but the deeds in the present were of the old and discredited kind.

Kossuth said in one of his impassioned speeches of the United States—"the flag without a stain, the country without a crime in its whole history!"

The surrender of American principles at the Peace Conference would forfeit the right of this country to this splendid tribute if the United States should now fail to reaffirm and preserve American principles.

Our associates, with our consent and connivance, have sown the dragon teeth of many another war. They have revealed to the workmen of all Europe, who relied upon the sanctity of the Fourteen Points, that at the peace table most of the conquerors were animated by the spirit of acquisition that was the primary cause of the war.

We have made 150 million people in Russia distrust us and hate us. We have turned the friendship of the Italians against us.

We have set up for selfish, imperialistic purposes of great Powers a horde of little States, just as Napoleon set up many little States to safeguard his future power and dominance.

There never was a time when one-half of the world was so bitterly set against the other half. There never was a time when it was more unsafe for a rich nation like America to disarm.

The veterans of the war have sensed this world situation perfectly.

That being so, the veterans are right when they urge preparedness. And they are right, also, in the method by which they urge that we should prepare.

We do not want a great standing army of professional soldiers. We do not need the army of 580,000 men which President Wilson has asked for as the first step of a league to promote world-wide peace.

The professional soldier has been a menace to human liberty always wherever he dominated. The citizen-soldier has been the bulwark of liberty since men began to regard liberty as worth fighting for. The whole psychology of the professional soldier is wrong for a democracy. He is little defence and he is a great menace always.

We cannot have an army of professional soldiers large enough to defend the nation against a powerful external enemy. But as long as our citizens are untrained, and without military knowledge, even a small professional army is big enough for a bold, unscrupulous man to use for the destruction of liberty in our democracy.

Our forefathers, knowing the history of the professional army, discarded it and chose to rely upon a citizens' army.

Secretary Baker's program, urged before Congress with the approval of the President, for an army of nearly 600,000 men shows how far this Democratic administration has departed from the traditional policy of our forefathers in domestic policies as in foreign relations.

It is proof of the abandonment, either consciously or unconsciously, of all the traditions and policies by which we have become the most powerful and the most envied of the nations of the earth—the policies of shunning all foreign entanglements, but always striving to lead in liberty, progress and enlightenment; of letting each generation decide for itself what cause it should support, and what cause it should fight, what nation it should support and what nation it should oppose, according to the right as each sees the right.

More Truth Than Poetry

THE IDEALISTIC PURPOSE

By S. E. KISER.

NEARLY everybody has a plan
To make our present troubles disappear,
To have things so arranged that any man
May work, without a future ill to fear.

NEARLY everybody knows a way
That leads to ease and happiness and peace,
Where nothing will be wrong, and, day by day,
The blessings that men covet must increase.

NEARLY everybody thinks that he
Could make the way much better than it is;
But always other people stubbornly
Prefer their plans, instead of liking his.

NEARLY everybody feels as sure
As he is sure that five and five are ten
That, with the chance to try it, he could cure
The hardships that disturb his fellow men.

BUT nearly everybody, if he might
Be favored with a chance to try his plan,
Would wish, before all else, to have the right
To boss and bully every other man.

FRIEND OF HUSBAND OR OF WIFE

Many married folk are living unhappy lives because in their choice of individual friends they make selections not congenial to both.

Mrs. Wife, just because you happen to dislike, without good reason, the couple your husband finds pleasing to him is not sufficient cause for you to be selfish about it and refuse to mingle with them.

Mr. Husband, you have no right to embarrass your wife by not treating her special friends decently simply because you do not find them interesting.

Neither husband nor wife should deny the other the right to have such friends as either may desire, providing the ones under discussion are of good reputation and character.

It is a rather difficult matter for any couple to find another married couple fully satisfactory to both sides of the friendship.

If you think, Mr. Husband, that you are well liked by all your wife's friends, you are mistaken; and, Mrs. Wife, you also have a wrong opinion if you consider that you are popular with all of your husband's friends.

MY DEAR Murph.
IN THE first place.
I'M NOT in politics.
AND WHOEVER I vote for.
IS MY business.
AND I'M here to tell you.
THAT ANY guy.
WHO WAS once a bartender.
WHO COULD build himself up.
TO WHERE you are.
HE'S EITHER all right.
OR THERE'S something the matter with him.
AND BECAUSE of that.
I WANT to warn you.
AND TO tell you a story.
ABOUT A fellow out West.
WHO GOT to be Mayor.
AND HE appointed his son.
TO BE his secretary.
AND HIS son-in-law.
TO BE something else.
AND HE made his law partner.
THE CHAIRMAN of something.
AND AFTER a while.
SOME NOSEY person.
STARTED SNOOPING around.
AND DISCOVERED a scandal.
AND BEFORE he got through.
THEY HAD tied the scandal.
TO THE Mayor's law partner.
AND THEN to his son.
AND HIS son-in-law.
AND THEN to the Mayor.
AND I always believed.
THAT THEY weren't all guilty.
BUT BECAUSE the Government.
WAS A family affair.
THEY ACCUSED them all.
AND THE poor old Mayor.
HAD A nervous breakdown.
AND THE rest of the family.
WERE COMPELLED to resign.
AND NONE of them was rich.
AND THEY had to work.
AND BECAUSE of the scandal.
THEY HAD a hard time.
AND I'VE always said.
THAT IF the Mayor.
HAD HAD good sense.
AT LEAST one of the family.
WOULD HAVE been left outside.
AND NOT been a member.
OF THE official family.
SO IF anything happened.
THERE WOULD have been one.
WHOSE SKIRTS were clean.
AND THE whole blame family.
WOULDN'T A'BEEN on the bum.
AND YOU'VE got to remember.
THAT THE bigger the family.
THE MORE likelihood.
THAT SOMETHING will happen.
AND BESIDES all that.
IT ISN'T fair.
TO TAKE your kid along.
WHEN YOU'RE riding a bicycle.
IN THE thick of the traffic.
IT'S NOT fair to the kid.
BECAUSE IF you go down.
HE'S GOING down with you.

I THANK you.

WONDERSOFA ROCK FROM ANOTHER WORLD

By Garrett P. Serviss

A VERY strange stone dropped from the sky at midday on April 9 last, and struck the earth near Cumberland Falls, in southwestern Kentucky. It was first caught sight of speeding in a brilliant blaze, that defied the sunshine, across northeastern Tennessee. It exploded and flung fragments broadcast, and the concussions that it produced "were terrific, causing buildings to rock," at Sawyer P. O.

So far the story of this bolide is not dissimilar to those of others that have plunged through the air and buried themselves in the ground, or been dashed to pieces on rocks. But a new feature is introduced by the results of the examination to which a fragment of the stone has been submitted by Dr. George P. Merrill, at the National Museum, in Washington. It appears that this object is, in some respects, unique, for it finds no exact position in the existing classification of meteorites of similar composition, and Dr. Merrill has made a place for it among the "achrondrites" under the name of "Whitleyite."

This may not be very exciting to the average reader, but his interest is sure to be sharply aroused when told that the strange stone, which is "a coarse, cemtatite breccia, closely compacted"—don't be deterred from reading on because of these technical terms, which are only like the name of a savage in his own tongue—shows "evidences of compression while under a considerable load, and other indications of its having formed a portion of a body of considerable size, even of planetary dimensions."

From Another World

Now, pause a moment and reflect on what that statement can only mean. It is that that stone came to us from some other world. Let us not bother with the objection which some scientific "dry-as-dust" is sure to raise to the use of the word "world." It is hard enough to fix the average person's attention on scientific things anyway, and picturesque words often help. A "world" does not necessarily mean a body as big as the earth, or one blessed like the earth with the presence of "zoologed animals without feathers." We can, for instance, properly enough speak of the moon as a world, nothwithstanding its relative smallness and its probable lifelessness.

This meteorite, then, bears evidence of having once formed part of a world somewhere in space. It even gives us information about the composition and the geological history of that mysterious world, for it consists of several different minerals, and these have been joined and compacted together after having previously formed parts of other stones that have been reduced to fragments. All this happened in that other world.

A Wonderful History

"The most striking macroscopic," (visible to the naked eye) "features, aside from its brecciated" (made up of angular fragments) "structure," says Dr. Merrill, "are the occasional enclosures, sometimes four or five centimetres in diameter, of a dark, nearly black, chondritic stone. I do not recall another instance of so plain an admixture of stones of quite different type."

Think of the ages of existence of the mother-world of that meteorite, of the slow development of its rocky strata, their upheavals, the scattering and mixture of their fragments, the deliberate processes of nature by which they were cemented into new rocks—and, then, of the incredible catastrophe that rent that world, and flung its fragments into space, where they wandered until this one became entangled in the earth's atmosphere, and was brought down, to become a specimen in a museum of another world than that of its birth.

Faith, the Comforter
Constitutional Rights
One Hour Worth One Day
Prosperity and Manhood

—By Arthur Brisbane

Copyright, 1919.

Ella Wheeler Wilcox is dead. Millions mourn the loss of a friend and an inspiration. She was an enthusiast, and made others enthusiastic. She felt strongly, and made others do the same. She accumulated fame, money, praise. But what she valued, what made her happy, was faith. She lost her husband, firmly believing that she would see him and live with him again. It was that, not her success, that brought happiness in late years.

You may say of faith, the comforter, what Voltaire said of God: "If there had not been any it would have been necessary to invent one. Human beings could not have done without."

Coal miners say that the President deprives them of constitutional rights when he interferes with their strike. The constitution says the constitution can be changed. If the constitutional rights of five hundred thousand miners threaten the comfort, work and living of ninety-nine millions, how long should it take the people to change the constitution and eliminate those "rights"?

From the President down, no intelligent, just man would deprive any other of his right. There are two sides to the question, the rights of five hundred thousand miners and the rights of all the others in the nation of a hundred millions.

Men have a right to work, to heat, to light, to transportation. They have a right to demand that miners and mine owners shall adjust their quarrels without saying to the hundred million: "You shall walk to your work, if you have any, and endure cold, and go without light while we settle our little quarrel."

"Released for immediate publication," comes from the National Security League, a little document asking "When ever was manhood possible except as inseparable from the ownership of property?"

Property is fine. No man should be separated from it except by the due process of law. Nevertheless, it is possible to have manhood, quite separate from ownership of property.

It says, "Foxes have holes, and birds of the air have nests; but the Son of man hath nowhere to lay his head." He had no property, nevertheless. He could not be described as lacking in manhood. There have been humbler examples also. Lincoln didn't have much property. He tried hard and unsuccessfully to get a five thousand dollar job with the government. John Brown didn't take any securities with him to Harper's Ferry, Christopher Columbus never got rich; he went to prison. It is comfortable to be rich. Honest wealth should not be disturbed, but it is possible to be poor and still manly.

In the Argentine republic they are fighting rats. Too much grain stored away has developed too many rats. Too many rats bring a threat of bubonic plague, that sweeps away humans. In New York city Dr. Copeland, health officer, finds that rats walk to shore on ropes that fasten ships to the docks. He orders all rats on ships killed by poisonous gas before the ships unload. England has done that for years and has been able to avoid the nuisance or quarantine.

The day will come, in this century or some other, when rats, mice, disease germs and other vermin will be unknown on earth, but men will have their troubles even then and, fortunately, life without trouble would be a dull nuisance.

Captain Boycott, working for the Earl of Erne in County Mayo, would be interested to know how useful his name is in modern days, and how sometimes it represents a crime, and sometimes "wise statesmanship." Practically all the civilized nations use the unpopular captain's name to designate a conspiracy to injure. With boycotting as with killing, it depends on who does it.

If individuals conspire to boycott another, that is crime. If one kills another, that is crime, but if the nation goes to war to kill others, that is glory. And if a lot of nations combine in a boycott to ruin another, as the nations of Europe are now combining to bring the Russian Bolsheviks to their knees, that is statesmanship. It all depends.

Living cost is higher, wages higher also, although that is not mentioned so often. A hundred years ago in this country there was just one man able to earn one dollar a day, all the year round. Now there are millions earning one dollar an hour. It is not much exaggeration to say that in money an hour of an American working man's time is worth about as much now as a whole twelve-hour day used to be worth. That is progress.
